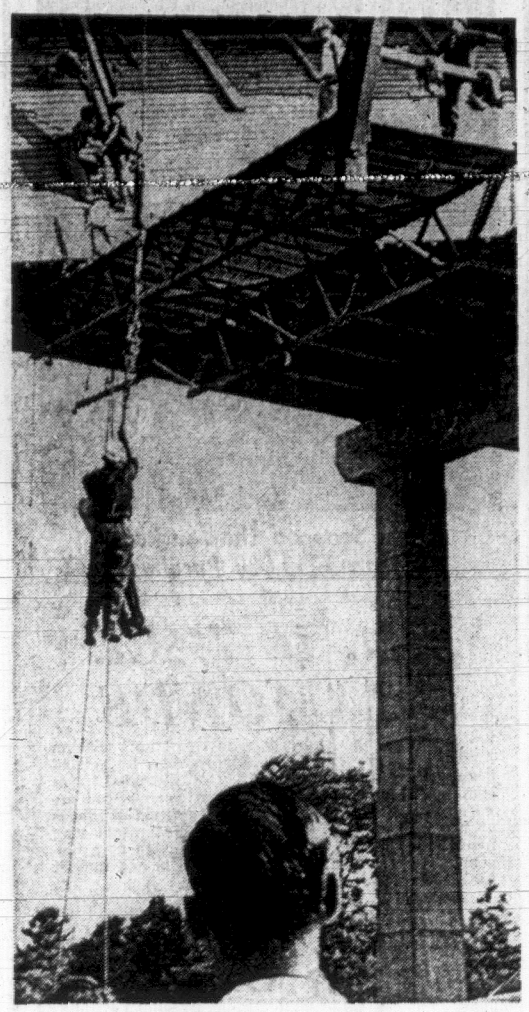
One Killed, Two Injured In Ottawa Bomb Blast



TRAPPED WORKERS are aided by rescuers hoisted to highway bridge in Kittery, Maine, where construction platform gave way today, spilling eleven men 95 feet to the ground. Several workers were able to hang onto bridgework until rescuers arrived. (AP Wirephoto.)

FOUR MEN DIE IN PLUNGE FROM BRIDGE

KITTERY, Maine (UPI) — Eleven men fell 95 feet to the ground today when a platform on which they were working collapsed on a highway bridge under construction. Four men were killed and seven were injured, three seriously.

The platform holding 15 workmen gave way at one end but three managed to grab girders and a fourth was snared in a rope until rescued.

The moveable platform was beneath the roadway of the $21 million bridge designed to carry Interstate 95 over the Piscataqua River which flows between Kittery and Portsmouth, N.H.

As the platform gave way, two workers grasped bridgework but lost their grip and plunged to the dirt below.

Firemen on aerial ladders rescued the three men trapped in the girders for more than one hour. The workman dangling from a rope was brought down by a rescue crew in a large crane.

Cause of the accident was not known.

John Shea, 23, an engineer-technician at Portsmouth naval shipyard, said he heard a "loud bang" and saw the platform tilt.

He said he saw six men clinging to the platform and one slipped off. He said that as he climbed a fence to offer aid, "I saw another man who was holding onto a girder slip off."

★ ★ ★

The workmen were removing planking beneath the bridge. The platform moved back and forth crosswise on two I-beams. The beams, he said, apparently sagged downward, tilting the platform and dumping out the workmen.

A fire official who helped rescue two of the men trapped in the girders said one was "very cool — he helped guide us to him." He said the second man was in a state of "semi-shock."

U.S. Senate Repeals Tonkin Resolution

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate voted today to repeal the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution, amid sharp debate over tactics being followed by Republican supporters of President Nixon's Southeast Asia policies.

This is the resolution which President Lyndon B. Johnson used as authority to escalate the war against North Vietnam. It was adopted following reports of an attack on American warships in the Gulf of Tonkin.

President Johnson later used the resolution to send more than 500,000 troops into South Vietnam.

Sunday Drinks For B.C.

By BRUCE YEMEN

Sunday drinking with meals in licensed dining establishments will be legal in British Columbia July 1, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today.

Extended hours of sale — to as late as 1 a.m. weekdays — were also announced as the provincial government instituted a number of recommended liquor law changes proposed by the Morrow Commission on Liquor in March.

Other changes allow women to serve drinks in all licensed premises, restrict pubs to serving one glass of beer at a time and make available colored photographic identification for 19-year-olds.

NO DANCING

Sunday liquor with meals will be available between the hours of noon and 10 p.m. No cabaret-type entertainment or dancing will be permitted on Sunday, Peterson said.

Licensed premises which currently close at midnight may stay open until 1 a.m. providing they are open no more than 14 hours in any business day. Earliest possible pub opening will continue at 9 a.m.

Private recreational clubs who serve regular meals can also serve liquor on Sundays between noon and 10 p.m.

Peterson said the 14-hour daily opening period is as long as any in Canada.

The identification cards for 19-year-olds or other youthful looking drinkers may be obtained through branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia where special equipment is already available.

VALIDATE CARDS

They will then have to be validated at a liquor store where an affidavit will be taken as to the age of the card-holder.

Peterson said the cards are voluntary but indicated it

'Wrenching' Foreign Policy Changes Likely

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will table six white papers Thursday which will map Canada's future course in world affairs for the next decade.

The six papers — totalling a concise aggregate of only 200 pages — are the distillation of the most intensive and longest policy review by the Trudeau administration on any subject.

They are expected to propose some wrenching changes in Canada's traditional stance towards the outside world and, because of Canada's special role as a innovative and influential middle power, are likely to be given extremely close scrutiny throughout the capitals of the world not only for information on the specific Canadian plans but hints for general trends in the international climate.

The two-year-long studies, launched on orders of Prime Minister Trudeau within days of his assuming office will be summarized by a general statement of overall policy.

It will be followed up with specific papers covering areas of special interest to the Trudeau government.

POLICE AND ARMY bomb experts survey damage of national defence headquarters building in downtown Ottawa today. A bomb, planted at the side of the temporary wooden building, ripped a hole and the force of the explosion killed one woman and injured two others working inside. Police say they have no suspects. Rotating Postal Strikes Hit City, Four Provinces

Thousands of postal workers in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario walked off the job early today.

In Victoria, 320 members of the Letter Carriers Union and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers are on strike after walking out at 5:30 a.m. This is the second time Victoria workers have struck; the first was June 17.

Stan Darlington, Victoria branch president of the CUPW said this morning all major centres on Vancouver Island are shut down. He said the walkouts would last 24 hours.

STILL ON STRIKE

On the mainland, walkouts began in New Westminster and quickly spread to Prince Rupert, all centres in the Okanagan and Kootenays, many parts of the Fraser Valley including Mission, Surrey, Port Coquitlam and Delta.

About 800 workers remained on strike in Calgary. They left their jobs Tuesday, and a union official said they would not be back at work before 6 a.m. Thursday.

Another 800 workers in Edmonton struck this morning for the second time since the Council of Postal Unions began rotating strikes in early May. There is no indication how long the Edmonton walkout will continue.

Postal workers in Winnipeg, the first city to be hit by rotating strikes, were on strike today for the third time.

The Winnipeg strike involves about 1,100 workers and will last 48 hours.

In Ontario, 900 men are off the job in Ottawa, 500 in Hamilton; and workers in parts of the borough of North York and the towns of Port Credit, Mississauga, Milton, Oakville, Malton, Woodbridge, Thornhill, Richmond Hill, Clarkson, Streetsville, Markham, Pickering, Stouffville and Ajax.

Hamilton's workers had just

Defence Building Target of Raid

OTTAWA (CP) — A St. Jean Baptiste Day bomb blast rocked a national defence headquarters building early today, killing one woman and injuring two other persons.

Dead is Jeanne D'Arc St. Germain, 50, a communicator operator in the defence telecommunications centre.

Capt. H. B. Vallance, 33, was taken to military hospital with lacerations. Pte. G. I. Swaffield, 23, was treated at the medical unit at defence headquarters for shock and later released.

Defence department spokesmen said the bomb was placed in a long cement well just outside the room where Mrs. St. Germain and Pte. Swaffield were working.

The bomb, believed to have contained a large quantity of dynamite, blew up at 6:26 a.m., a minute after an anonymous caller telephoned a local radio station to say there would be an explosion.

WINDOWS BROKEN

The blast ricocheted back and forth across Lisgar Street, shattering windows in a two-block area around the building in the city's central area and blowing a large hole through the wall.

A public works department official said damage to the defence department building, a Second World War "temporary" frame structure on a concrete foundation, was more than $10,000.

More than 100 windows were broken and there was damage to electrical circuits. But the communications centre was operating.

NO LEADS

Ottawa police said they have no leads on possible suspects.

But occurence of the blast on the feast day of St. Jean Baptiste, patron saint of French Canada, and the target selected pointed to possible action by separatist or Quebec nationalist terrorists.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux issued a statement saying he was "shocked at the bombing outrage." He extended sympathy to the family of Mrs. St. Germain.

Cadieux said the building is regularly patrolled by armed forces security guards but the bomb apparently was planted between patrols.

"Additional security precautions have been put into effect," he said.

Telephone bomb threats later in the morning against the Chateau Laurier Hotel and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics proved false.

BARRICADE STREET

Police and firemen blocked off glass-littered Lisgar Street in front of the building while city police, the RCMP and armed forces investigators picked their way through the debris.

The blast, which blew out heavy chunks of the concrete foundation and peeled off the outside shingles to leave a hole 10 by 12 feet, came about 30 minutes before the guard changes at the main entrance to the building and an hour

Labor Group To Help Pay Guild's Fines

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of about 80 unions affiliated with the British Columbia Federation of Labor have agreed to press their memberships for financial contributions to the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, faced with fines and legal fees of about $100,000 arising from the five-week tugboat strike.

"Everyone pledged to do everything possible to assist the guild," said Federation secretary Ray Haynes Tuesday night following a special meeting.

RAIDS SUPPORT GROUND ACTION

U.S. Escalates Cambodia Air War

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The Cambodian military command disclosed today that United States jet fighter-bombers, in an apparent major shift in U.S. policy, have attacked deep into Cambodia in direct support of Cambodian ground forces.

The announcement, which U.S. officials in Saigon would neither confirm nor deny, coincided with reports that North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units were marshalling east of Phnom Penh, and that heavy fighting had broken out again at Kompong Speu, 30 miles southwest of the Cambodian capital.

The U.S. air strikes helped break the month-long siege of Kompong Thom, a provincial capital 80 miles north of Phnom Penh, a Cambodian spokesman said. This extension of the American air war appeared to be a sign of recognition by the United States that without some assist from strong U.S. firepower, the Cambodian forces might crumple under the Communist command's growing pressure.

Maj. Am Rong, the Cambodian spokesman, said he could furnish no details on the exact location of attacks, the types of U.S. jets involved, the time they went into action or the results.

Eyewitness reports on Tuesday from Kompong Thom and Skoun, another endangered Cambodian town, said U.S. propellor-driven OV-10 aircraft had been marking targets for South Vietnamese jet fighter-bombers supporting Cambodian troops.

The U.S. command in Saigon, apparently under strict orders from the Pentagon, has refused repeatedly to discuss U.S. air activity in Cambodia other than to repeat the Pentagon's admission Monday that American pilots were flying up to 100 miles inside Cambodia to attack North Vietnamese and Viet Cong supply lines.

Komgpong Thom is 95 miles from the South Vietnamese border and well beyond the 21.7-mile limit set by President Nixon for U.S. ground forces in Cambodia.

Meanwhile, Cambodian troops began a sweep today about five miles east of Phnom Penh, where a North Vietnamese and Viet Cong force was reported marshalling, possibly for an attack with rockets and mortars on the capital.

It was the closest concentration of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces reported around the capital to date and tended to confirm intelligence reports that an attack could come at any time.

The Cambodian spokesman also reported that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops had surrounded the provincial capital of Kompong Speu, 30 miles west southwest of Phnom Penh, and that fighting for control of the town was heavy. He said the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong had launched repeated attacks again the government defenders, but that the Cambodians apparently still held the town.

finished a 48-hour strike which ended Tuesday afternoon when they received instructions to walk out again this morning.

The walkouts came after the Council of Postal Unions issued a get-tough statement Tuesday in Ottawa saying the strikes are "in direct response to the inaction by government negotiators in bargaining."

On the West Coast, Jim McCall, strike zone director in British Columbia, said earlier:

'DEADLY BLOW'

"At the end of this week, the public of Canada will know that the rotation strikes have been effective. The postal service will be dealt a deadly blow this week and from now on."

The cities of Vancouver and Toronto are back to normal today after 24-hour stoppages Tuesday. Approximately 1,800 men in Greater Vancouver and 3,000 in Toronto are back at work. Workers in Prince Edward Island are back at their jobs today after taking most of Tuesday off.

The federal government and leaders of the two postal unions resumed negotiations today in Ottawa.

The postal unions are seeking twice the size of a government offer that would raise wages by just less than six per cent a year in a 30-month contract. Average wage now is $3.06 an hour.

At maximum straight-time wages on a 40-hour week, a letter carrier earns $6,246 a year or $119.60 a week and a postal clerk earns $6,546 a year or $124.46 a week.

60-CENT INCREASE

The unions are asking for a 60-cent pay increase over a two-year contract, plus overtime benefits estimated to bring total monetary costs of their demands to 30 per cent more.

The treasury board, operating under the government's six per cent wage increase guidelines, has offered 41 cents an hour more over a 2½-year period.

The unions are also demanding a guarantee that no members will be fired because of technological or operational changes in post office operations.

PROFICIENCY CRESTS are presented by Maj. Donald A. Harris of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, to members of No. 2483 (Esquimalt) Queen's Own Rifles of Canada Cadet Corps at special parade held at Work Point Tuesday. He also presented a shield to CWO Ted Rodd, won by the corps for being the most proficient in British Columbia.

Mediation Order Given In Construction Tie-Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Leslie Peterson Tuesday ordered appointment of mediation officers in a dispute which has tied up $200,000,000 worth of construction work in British Columbia.

He said management and labor negotiators had had "ample time" to settle the dispute without intervention. Since April 14, nine unions have been locked out and a 10th has gone on strike.

Mr. Peterson issued the directive to the B.C. Mediation Commission after separate meetings Tuesday with the Construction Labor Relations Association and representatives of the unions.

Gus Leonidas was name dto mediate the strike unvolving the major cement companies and the teamsters' union while Clark Gilmour will oversee talks between the CLRA and the building trade unions.

The meeting followed 10 days of talks, ordered by Mr. Peterson, which ended Monday. Spokesman said there had been progress in these talks — but only in non-monetary issues.

Appointment of mediation officers for an initial 10-day term also will include a strike-lockout in the cement industry in the B.C. Lower Mainland, Mr. Peterson said.

NOT ORDERING

The labor minister said that he was not ordering arbitration. He did say other courses are open to him under the Mediation Commission Act; arbitration is one.

The minister also asked that any offers made during the mediation period be submitted to contractors or employees, regardless of the feelings of the negotiating committees.

C. J. Connaghan, CLRA president, approved of this request but said the mediation period will mean another 10 days wasted unless unions become "more realistic."

Mr. Connaghan said CLRA offers range from 14 to 25 per cent in two years and some offers have been rejected without being put to a vote among union members.

"It will be interesting to see the reaction when the average laborer finds out CLRA has offered about $100 a month increase. It could help bring settlement."

NO INTERVENTION

There was no immediate comment from union leaders on Mr. Peterson's moves. Mr. Peterson said neither side had wanted third-party intervention.

Ed Fay, secretary of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said some offers were for so little more than previous ones that negotiators felt it not worth while to submit them to members. Some others were the same as earlier proposals.

He asked Mr. Peterson to use his influence to get the CLRA to drop its demand that all unions settle before work resumes. Mr. Connaghan said the CLRA continues to insist on this.

Meanwhile, talks broke off between the B.C. Hotels Association and negotiators for 600 workers locked out by, or on strike at, 63 hotels from Vancouver to Hope, 80 miles east of Vancouver.

Decision was reserved in B.C. Supreme Court on an association bid for injunctions to ban publication of advertisements by the unions which the association said might affect hotel business.

After the court hearing, union officials refused to attend a meeting with the association Tuesday night. No date was set for resumption of negotiations in the wage strike.

Sailing Mishap Orphans Aided By Yachtsmen

Yachtsmen and retail clerks of the Greater Victoria area are rallying to help the three children orphaned when their parents drowned during a sailing race from Esquimalt to Port Angeles June 6.

Funds have been set up by the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, the Turkey Head Sailing Association and the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

The two couples who drowned, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Collis of 2531 Orchard, and Mr. and Mrs. John Goodman of 330 Moss, left no wills and carried no insurance.

The Collis' leave two children Bethan, eight, and David, six. The Goodmans had a son, Kevan, six.

SUPER MARKET

Collis, 32, was a clerk in a supermarket and his wife taught at St. Christopher's School. Goodman, 35, and his wife operated a fish and chip shop in the Fairfield shopping centre.

The Retail Food and Drug Clerks Union, Local 1518, is also working to ensure that the orphans will receive financial help.

The union has agreed to underwrite all expenses for a fund-raising dance, to be held in the ice arena of the Esquimalt Municipal Sports Centre on Saturday, Sept. 19 at 9 p.m.

Dance chairman Harvey Simons said tickets will be sold at a minimum of $5 but he hopes that many attending will give much more. All proceeds will be earmarked for the children's funds.

A total of 1,500 tickets were printed today but Simons says they will go as high as 2,000, depending on the demand.

CAPITAL SCENE

The Country Cousins Club, a square dancing group, will hold a family picnic Sunday at 11 a.m. in Eagle Park. Hot dogs will be sold or lunches may be brought. There will be games for all ages.

Secretary Resigns

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wally Ross has resigned as secretary of the provincial New Democratic Party. He said his reasons for leaving are personal. "It's been 12 hours a day every day and I'm about ready for a rest."

CAR INJURES GIRL ON BIKE

A 14-year-old girl suffered minor injuries when the bicycle she was riding collided with a car Monday afternoon.

Janet Munday, 2130 Central Ave., was released from Royal Jubilee Hospital the same afternoon following the accident on Oak Bay near Redfern.

She collided with a car driven by James P. Rekunyk, of Coquitlam.

School Role Challenged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition Leader Dave Barrett (NDP-Coquitlam) challenged the provincial government Tuesday to produce a single qualified psychologist or psychiatrist who would say Brannan Lake school for boys near Nanaimo is a treatment centre for emotionally-disturbed youth.

"In fact, it is no different than the vast majority of inadequate backward, ill-conceived institutions that exist in most states and provinces in North America," he said.

Barrett was commenting on recent statements by John Noble, superintendent of the Brannan Lake school, that it has been transformed in the last year from a human dumping ground to a remedial treatment centre.

Fraud Trial Transformed To Hearing

In an unprecedented move Tuesday Judge William Ostler changed a trial in provincial court to a preliminary hearing and invoked a no publication order.

What began as the trial of Clyde Gillies, 47, of Hillside Avenue or Richmond, B.C., on a charge of defrauding a woman of her house and property, was switched to a preliminary hearing in the afternoon session.

Ostler said after the crown's case had closed that he had heard an amount of evidence which he considered "inadmissible" but which implied "this person is perhaps a bad character of doubtful honesty."

Therefore he changed the trial to preliminary hearing and committed Gillies for trial in a higher court.

Defence counsel Gordon Vosburgh requested a no publication order to cover the entire trial-turned-hearing and Ostler issued the order with the words "assuming that I have the authority."

FIRST WITNESS

Meanwhile the Times had already published highlights of the morning's proceedings as a trial, including key testimony from the crown's first witness.

Court sources said no action could be taken against the Times because its story was in print before the order was made.

The Colonist, however, which publishes in the morning, was not permitted to use any evidence that had been given during the proceedings.

Bail set at $5,000 for Gillies had not been met, and Vosburgh decided to take the matter of a request for reduction to Victoria county court pending trial, which may take several months.

THE WEATHER

The weather picture is generally sunny today but a storm system moving in on the north coast is expected to move down the coast, reaching the Victoria area overnight and Thursday morning.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport forecasts increasing cloud for Thursday, with some chance of light rain in the late afternoon as they have been, with an overnight low of 50 and a high Thursday of 70.

Winds will be light, occasionally southwesterly 15 today and Thursday morning, becoming brisk westerlies Thursday afternoon.

before Mrs. St. Germain's shift was to end.

It was the first major explosion in Ottawa since a bomb exploded in a mail box outside the former national Film Board building on New Year's Eve, 1968.

The blast, heard by residents up to eight miles away, jolted Mrs. Marjorie Grant of nearby Cartier Street and her husband out of a sound sleep. Their apartment is less than a block away from the blast scene.

"We knew it was a bomb," Mrs. Grant said. "It shoook the building . . . I heard sirens and went to the window to look. I saw people running from all over. Since my husband worked over there, I came over to investigate."

Joel Scher of Cartier Street said he thought the explosion was "a large plane breaking the sound barrier."

"I looked out to see whether it was thundering. Then I heard the fire engines."

Post Office Hit by Bomb

MONTREAL (CP) — A small dynamite explosion caused minor damage to a post office station in the city's north end early today.

The explosion shattered windows in the postal station and a nearby building. No one was reported injured.

AT VOCATIONAL SCHOOL OPENING

Bennett Takes All Credit

The federal government footed most of the bill, but Premier Bennett took most of the credit Tuesday when he opened the B.C. Vocational School on Interurban Road.

During opening ceremonies held in a large, empty shop and attended by more than 500 people, Education Minister Donald Brothers, acting as chairman, introduced Bennett as "the man who made it all possible."

But earlier in the ceremony Victoria MP David Groos, representing Manpower and Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen, said the federal government put up three-quarters of the total cost of the school, including $2½ million for construction and $500,000 for equipping.

During his address Premier Bennett said B.C. is one of the three fastest growing areas in North America "despite the temporary slowdown caused by the money markets, inflation and labor-management problems."

He said while the Canadian economy is growing at an annual rate of 1.3 per cent, B.C.'s economy is expanding at a rate of 3.5 per cent.

"British Columbia's normally high growth rate comes about largely because of our export-based economy. To export successfully in competition with nations which have lower production costs, lower wages and lower standards of living we must maintain a high rate of productivity.

"And that, my friends, is impossible without a highly trained work force."

C. J. Oliver, president of the Vancouver company that built the school, handed over a gold key to the building to Public Works Minister William Chant, whose department designed the school.

Platform guests included several local mayors, high provincial government officials and Trade Minister Waldo Skillings who arrived late.

After officially opening the school, Bennett used a cutting torch to sever a chain at the main entrance to the school grounds.

The first phase of the school includes 13 classrooms and 10 workshops. Not all the shops have yet been equipped.

Most of the vocational students are still using rented facilities in Victoria. Classes in the subjects they study will be moved to the new school following completion of phases two and three, cafeteria and food service training area, and a three-storey classroom and laboratory block.

13 Die in Blast

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A truckload of fireworks being transported for religious ceremonies blew up in the town of Aguas Belas in northeastern Brazil Tuesday and officials reported 13 persons killed and 15 injured. Police said they did not know what caused the explosion.

MINI-PROTEST OVER LIGHTS

Not everybody was impressed with the new B.C. Vocational School on Interurban Road opened by Premier W. A. C. Bennett Tuesday.

At least not Mrs. F. C. Smith, 4475 Densmore, who staged her own mini-protest as guests arrived for the opening.

She stood at the entrance road to the new building and Interburban with a placard reading "over-lighted" and "too many poles."

"All these lights here are enough to cover a subdivision," she said, pointing to the overhead lights on the buildings, parking lots and entrance road.

She noted that there were no street lights on Interurban.

"No wonder my Hydro bill is so high."

Mrs. Smith's home and property is directly across Interurban from the new school although it fronts on Densmore and her protest Tuesday brought a word of caution from a Saanich police officer at one point who told her to not impede traffic.

Mrs. Smith is not anti-vocational school but finds it ironic that the new school warrants curbing and overhead lighting while Interurban, which she has lived beside for 10 years, has neither.

"I wish they would lay a little black top over beside the road so my kids could walk to school"

U.S. Couples Plane Sale With New Peace Initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government is sounding out Israel and key Arab governments on a proposal designed to produce a Middle East ceasefire and revive United Nations efforts to negotiate a settlement.

The proposal has been discussed with Israel, Egypt, and Jordan. Other countries are reported to have been informed, as well and State Secretary William P. Rogers is due to discuss the proposal publicly this week.

The U.S. initiative it is understood, basically calls for Israeli withdrawal from most of the territory captured in the 1967 war in return for Arab commitments to accept Israel's existence and respect its borders. It comes as the Nixon administration is reported ready to sell new warplanes to Israel to offset increased military support for Egypt.

Israel asked for the planes last September and has pressed particularly hard for a decision since Soviet combat pilots began flying defensive patrols inside Egypt more than two months ago.

The Nixon administration, faced with warnings that a new sale of jets to Israel would further alienate the Arabs, has decided to make the vaguest possible announcement of its readiness to sell the Israelis at least part of what they want.

The emphasis, therefore, will be on the peace initiative.

Administration advisers were reported somewhat encouraged Tuesday by Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan's statement that Israel should be able to give up some of the territory, chiefly Egyptian, won in the 1967 six-day war in return for peace with the Arabs.

This appeared to be a public response by Dayan to U.S. pressure for concessions on the territorial issue and it was taken in Washington as indicating a positive attitude toward negotiations.

Last month, President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt said he would accept a temporary ceasefire of up to six months if Israel agreed to follow a 1967 UN resolution which, among other things, called for withdrawal from captured territory.

But Monday night Nasser was quoted as saying in Libya he would not accept a ceasefire. Still there is some belief in the state department that Nasser is interested in peace possibilities.

Dubcek Removed From Envoy Post

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Alexander Dubcek, leader of the 1968 Czechoslovak liberalization drive, was relieved today of his post as ambassador to Turkey.

An announcement by the Czechoslovak news agency CTEK said President Ludvik Svoboda has assigned Dubcek to "other tasks."

Dubcek, 48, returned to Czechoslovakia from Ankara June 2, ostensibly to visit his ailing mother, but he was reported to have heard in the meantime that he has been expelled from the Communist Party.

His removal from the ambassadorial post came one day after Oldrich Cernik, premier during the Dubcek era, was replaced as minister of technical and investment development. Cernik was officially reported to have resigned.

The one-sentence CTK report of Dubcek's removal did not say what new tasks he was given.

The removal of the two men comes against a background of an impending meeting of the Communist party central committee, which is expected to discuss the purge of reformers that has been going on during the last year.

The opinion is that Dubcek and Cernik were removed before the meeting so that ultra-conservatives could not reproach the current moderate party chief, Gustav Husak, over the continued official employment of the two men.

The loss of his ambassadorial post was the latest in a series of reverses for Dubcek which began Aug. 20, 1968, the day of the Soviet-led Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Dubcek had been first secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist party for a little more than seven months, during which he tried to lead his country into a more liberal form of communism—"socialism with a human face."

He remained in office for eight months more until April 17, 1969, when he was replaced as first secretary by Husak.

Dubcek was then appointed to the politically unimportant post of chairman of the federal legislature but retained positions on the party's governing presidium and central committee.

But staunch pro-Moscow Communists continued to press for his total removal from political life. He was sent to Turkey, in effect into exile, while the work of stripping him of his few remaining party jobs continued.

His suspension from party membership came in March this year, with the Communist party organ Rude Pravo accusing him of "bourgeois fluctuations."

Church Must Appear to Be Poor—Pope

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Pope Paul said today "gradual, but not timid reforms" are under way to give the Roman Catholic Church an image of poverty more in keeping with the gospel.

Speaking to pilgrims at St. Peter's Basilica during his general audience, the 72-year-old Pontiff denied the church has the "fabulous riches, which from time to time, certain parts of public opinion attribute to it."

Stressing the poverty of Christ and the virtues of poverty, the Pope said the second Vatican council had stressed "even more than the personal virtue of poverty, the search for and practice of another kind of poverty, ecclesiastical poverty—that which must be practised by the church as such, as a collectivity gathered in the name of Christ."

Pope Paul added: "The church must be poor. But not only that—the church must appear to be poor."

Mr. Heath's Burdens

APART FROM HIS DOMESTIC problems — and any one of them can be considered as a major one — Britain's new Prime Minister Heath has a number of important foreign operations to conduct, and the first of these will be the European Common Market negotiations which open June 30.

This is a prickly question, both in terms of Britain's economic future and her political present. While the Labor Party has been generally in favor of Britain's joining the market, and Mr. Heath is himself a supporter of the project, there is a danger that the new Tory government may be faced with stiff opposition when the moment of truth arrives. The Labor opposition may decide to fight various aspects of the terms which the government must negotiate, and there is a sizable anti-Market feeling within the Conservative Party itself which might, with Labor encouragement, make itself known. Mr. Enoch Powell, for one, has pledged undying opposition to signing the Treaty of Rome, on which the Common Market is based.

The Telegraph, of London, says that the Market negotiations could have "more bearing on Britain's future than anything discussed during the election campaign." The Edinburgh Scotsman warns that the six continental members as well as Britain will have to be willing to compromise if any advance is to be made. And The Times, of London, urges a speedy decision, on the basis that Britain's friends have worked hard to overcome French objections, and that the matter should now be given high priority by the new government.

But that is only one of the crucial decisions to be made. Some of the British press are calling for a new approach by Britain to the war in Vietnam. The Times notes that some members on both sides of the Commons "took no pleasure from the Foreign Secretary's defence of each American move." And it asks: "Are we not now due for some fresh thinking about Vietnam in the Foreign Office?"

Closer to home, Mr. Heath has to do something about his pledge to cut taxation—possibly in a fall budget. Removal of the Selective Employment Tax, another promise, will not likely be effected until next year, when an alternative revenue-producer of some £600 millions can be devised. The controversial added value sales tax will also take lengthy preparation.

The Financial Times, on Mr. Heath's basic problem of inflation, has "no illusions about the difficulties of the task." It notes that Britain's slow growth rate leaves less scope for raising wages than most developed nations today, and curbing rising costs is essential. Says the Financial Times, "there is not much time to lose." That, at least, gives Britain lots of company—comfort, even though cold, for Mr. Heath.

A Threat to Willy Brandt

THREE SIGNIFICANT STATE elections in Western Germany have switched the focus of attention from the continued decline of Adolf Von Thadden's neo-Nazi NPD party — welcome as that decline may be — to the more serious situation faced by Chancellor Willy Brandt as the result of another change in popular support.

While the NPD lost all its seats in Lower Saxony and failed to win entry to the legislatures in North-Rhine Westphalia and the Saarland, the Free Democratic Party, which is Chancellor Brandt's minor partner in the governing coalition, was also suffering reverses in the state voting.

With Free Democrat help Mr. Brandt was able to wrest control of the Bonn government from the Christian Democratic Union — which fared well in the recent state contests. Should the swing against the small party continue, it could place Mr. Brandt's post as chancellor in serious jeopardy. And this at a time when he has initiated imaginative gestures to East Europe that promise to lessen tensions between the two ideological groups.

Those overtures have been sharply criticized by the powerful Christian Democratic Union. The state elections brought out substantial support for the criticism. On the basis of these indices, storm signals are flying for the former Mayor of Berlin and his hopes of rapprochement.

And Now, Children, Pay Up

LITTLE IS HEARD THESE days of the Red Guards, the young Chinese who performed an apparently necessary function to strengthen the position of Chairman Mao during an unsettled period in Red China's recent history.

But an unusual report that has filtered through the bamboo curtain seems to spell out an interesting message for some activists. The Red Guards, according to the report, are now being presented with the bill for the damage they caused when their crusade erupted in destructive violence.

Some of them have been drafted into labor battalions and forced to clean up the rubble they created. Some are being required to pay in cash for their vandalism. And some who cannot pay are threatened with imprisonment.

So the movement of the so-called cultural revolution seems to have come full circle back to a very old-fashioned orthodoxy. The stirring campaign to re-assert the influence of Mao could not, in the nature of things, avoid causing some damage. Now Mao's purpose has been served and those who served it, rather than receiving the rewards of their efforts, are told to pay for breakages along the way. A salutary lesson here.

Blow for Freedom

NOW THAT THE BREATHalyzer is out of breath, pending a ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada, there is time to examine its effect on a society in which a large proportion of the population drinks. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has been unable, according to the Toronto Globe and Mail, to show what effect, if any, the breathalyzer test has had in reducing highway deaths and injuries. Perhaps more time is needed to prove the instrument's worth.

Many Canadians expressed concern when the device first appeared because compulsory breath tests seemed to negate a person's traditional right to refuse to testify against himself. But mandatory breath tests were nevertheless considered effective in reducing the large percentage of accidents traceable to drinking drivers.

If the court gives the breathalyzer legislation a green light it may be worth considering whether the loss of freedom inherent in compulsory testing is counter-balanced by the potential deterrent effect the breathalyzer exerts on drinking drivers.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

The Polls Were Right, But the Voters ...

ON the morrow of the great British victory over the pollsters, soothsayers and electronic gadgeteers, there is again talk of banning political pulse-taking during election periods. Before endorsing an action which would deprive all these specialists of their livelihood and drive them, destitute, on to the labor market, we would do well to consider the possible defences which appear to be open to them in the present distressing case.

Western

(None of these apply to the CBC which was obviously covering some other election, possibly in Poland, of which we shall hear in due course).

First, there is the standard explanation. Briefly stated, a funny thing happened on the way to the polls. This accounting had its trial, and not altogether fortunate, run in 1948 when everyone, with the exception of the voters, was appalled and taken aback by the uncouth behavior of Harry Truman. Since then it has been elaborated to such a degree that it is beyond comprehension and can thus be readily employed to smother critics and other impudent persons.

The funny thing, as it invariable turns out, was clearly visible to the poll-takers but the clouds parted only at the last moment when it was too late to offer guidance to the public. Dates, technical difficulties and belated trends are important to the standard defence. So is the permissible margin of error. The mere fact that a certain Labor win becomes a Conservative victory is of trifling significance when all such factors are considered retroactively and given their just mathematical evaluation.

'Tailors of Tooley Street'

It would, however, be quite wrong to suppose that this defence, impressive but a little tiresome from frequent repetition, is the only one that can be offered in the present case.

Consider this possible alternative. The trouble is not with the pollsters (perish the thought) but originates in the fundamental backwardness of the British people.

This is the age of the new politics. Ask any avant-garde thinker. It is the era of opinion science, electronic divination and McLuhanism. Glamor has replaced issues and the medium is the message. The duty of the voter has accordingly changed; it is now, through his political behavior on polling day, to give formal ratification to conclusions already reached on his behalf by those who have read his mind.

Unhappily none of this has got through to the locals at the Haunch of Venison and other centres at which island destinies are somehow decided. The British, who invented political democracy, still entertain the crude notion that they should make their own judgments on issues as they see them. This makes them incapable of progress. They ignore science (unlike writers who show a decent respect for revealed mathematics); concentrate on their football pages; and in the end go uninstructed and unreconstructed to the polling booths.

It would be absurd to blame the polltakers who took their samples, made their projections and performed their gyrations with due diligence when the fault is clearly to be ascribed to the primitive behavior of unheeding voters.

Various other defences suggest themselves. For example, Perfidious Albion. It is invariably assumed by polltakers and their camp-followers that persons interviewed tell the truth about their voting intentions. But there are those who resent prying into matters which, they have considered private. In addition, much has been written about the collapse of moral standards and about the lawless spirit abroad in the land. The British, it is well known, have a perverted sense of humor and may be fully capable of leading earnest students up the garden path.

Are we then to punish the virtuous nose-counter for the vice of the voter?

Alternatively, downcast diagnosticians might make something of the well-known underdog obsession of the British people. The medium performed, projecting glamor from land's end to John O'Groats. Commentators, overwhelmed by all the portents of conservative doom unerringly identified by scientific radars, wept buckets of crocodile tears for the unfortunate Edward Heath. It was simply too much for the British voter. His intention was clear, open, published, but his resolution wavered over the last half pint; he succumbed at the last moment to human frailty and out of sheer compassion elected Edward.

Tiresome

Persons of doubtful character might suggest another explanation, which is not however to be recommended to the Gallup folk and others facing the grim prospect of life on the streets.

There was once a famous petition addressed to Parliament by nine tailors of Tooley Street. It began: "we, the people of England ..."

Is it possible, in an age illuminated by pseudo-science, that all the research was in vain because the statistical sages took the wrong samples from the wrong tailors on the wrong Tooley Street? Or did they forget the tailors entirely and consult each other, which would satisfactorily account for everything?

FROM WASHINGTON — By TIM TRAYNOR

Canada's Nationalism Worries the U.S.

CANADA has of late given American officialdom much to mull over. A protective note has been struck in Prime Minister Trudeau's Arctic initiatives, in the Denison Mines affair, and in relation to energy resource generally. Proposed tax reforms contain overtly nationalist incentives to investment in Canadian industries, and a review of the whole question of foreign investment goes forward.

Traynor

Amid public outpourings of nationalist sentiment, Energy Minister J. J. Greene links the various Canadian moves to a grand pattern of revulsion from the U.S. and assertion of a "new Canadian nationalism" involving strong resistance to American penetration and influence.

On a different level, the Canadian dollar is freed from its peg, raising questions as to the effect on the U.S. balance of payments and on the monetary system as a whole.

U.S. officials conversant with Canada have yet to assimilate all of this, but some preliminary thoughts about the drift of events are beginning to emerge. (This is, of course, in addition to the formal reactions to specific developments such as Mr. Trudeau's Arctic moves.)

In some official quarters, there is distinct uneasiness about some of the channels in which the nationalistic currents are flowing. Among the U.S. concerns is the possibility that elements of the tax reform package and a general stiffening of attitudes toward foreign investment indicate a trend which will increasingly qualify the virtually free flow of capital between the U.S. and Canada. It is said American trade and payments would be affected, and the question of a U.S. adjustment would thus arise.

An extreme formulation is as follows: By employing tax advantages which would direct the flow of Canadian investment, Canada would divert a substantial amount of investment away from the U.S., to the detriment of both U.S. industrial growth and the balance of payments. If there was no corresponding reduction in the flow of U.S. investment to Canada, the U.S. would have to take offsetting steps.

This could mean ending special arrangements by which Canada is exempted from restrictions on borrowing by foreigners and on investment abroad by U.S. firms. (Specifically, Canadian institutions and U.S. subsidiaries in Canada benefit from exemptions from the interest equalization tax on borrowing, and from direct controls on capital movement instituted in 1968 to bolster the U.S. balance of payments.)

Could Inhibit Flow

The way would be clear for such an effort to inhibit the flow of money to Canada, because it could no longer be argued that controls would be disruptive of a free interchange of money between the two countries. (This would already have been undermined by the Canadian tax reforms.)

It could further be said that imposition of controls would be in accord with changes in the basic payments picture — changes attested to by the unpegging and revaluation of the dollar. The strength of the dollar reflected movement away from a deficit in trade with the U.S., that is, away from the disadvantageous situation which formed the basis for the exemptions through which Canada was provided with continued inflows of capital to offset the trade deficit. Since there was not now the same need for the offset, withdrawal of the exemptions would not be out of order.

It must be stressed that this is an extreme formulation, though the fact that it even arises is a significant indication of the harsh mood prevailing in some quarters. Among calmer, and more influential, officials the harshest talk is discounted. In particular, there is flat rejection of anything smacking of reprisal against Canadian moves, actual or proposed.

A more moderate formulation is as follows: There is concern as to the payments situation which will emerge from Canada's movement away from a trade deficit with the U.S. and the consequent unpegging and revaluation of the dollar. Though there is the prospect of gains on the U.S. side, it is considered likely that the basic pattern will continue to be one of Canadian strength, allowing limited scope for improving the over-all U.S. payments balance. (It is recognized that the U.S. cannot automatically look for improvement through restoration of a trade surplus with Canada sufficient to offset deficits elsewhere.)

Stirring Turbulence

This alone makes for turbulence in trade matters, notably the Canadian-American auto agreement, with its residual elements of protection for the Canadian industry. With autos a large factor in Canada's strong export performance, the U.S. is increasingly intolerant of these special provisions, which, in effect, give the Canadian industry an added stimulus.

Superimposed on this are the nationalist provisions of the tax-reform package, and the possibility of further measures related to foreign investment in Canada. The immediate concern is with the proposed direction of Canadian money into Canadian stocks, while Canadian borrowers, and provincial governments in particular, would continue to rely heavily on New York. This could exacerbate the U.S. payments difficulties, and U.S. officials are taking a hard look at the prospects.

An important consideration is that the U.S. may well dismantle its system of restraints on capital movement — possibly beginning early next year. Canada thus stands to be put on the same footing as the rest of the world, but through a general removal of controls rather than through a withdrawal of exemptions.

The movement away from controls must, however, be reconciled with the need to strengthen the balance of payments, and the Canadian trade situation will be a large consideration in this. However, it is thought to be too early to tell what sort of corrective action might be needed, let alone whether it would be feasible or desirable.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of June 24, 1910

Ottawa — James G. Patterson, former lieutenant governor of Manitoba and now resident of Ottawa, has been appointed commissioner to investigate into state ownership of lands in the Arctic seas whether acquired by discovery, occupation or otherwise, and to report thereon to the president of the Privy Council of Canada from time to time. The instructions to Captain Bernier, who will sail north in a few days for another cruise in the Arctic, are to plant the flag upon additional islands in the Arctic region.

Letters

In Memoriam

A large number of elderly people come to this city to spend here the last years of their life. Some of them, hardly known to the public, are persons of rank and distinction. These lines are dedicated to the memory of one of these, Mr. Carl Weiselberger, whose recent passing was known only to a few close friends.

Mr. Weiselberger, born at Vienna in the year 1900, was forced to leave his native city when the Nazis had occupied Austria. At that time he had already established himself as a newspaperman and writer of note. A novel of his had appeared in print; two more were also ready for publication, their manuscripts, unfortunately, were lost in the holocaust of war and occupation.

In 1942 Carl Weiselberger came to Canada, a country which he loved with a deep and abiding love. The separatist movement with its threat to Canadian unity darkened the last months and weeks of his life.

Soon after the end of the war he secured a position with the Ottawa Citizen and a short time afterwards became its music and art critic; he stayed there in the same capacity until he retired in 1968. His encyclopedic knowledge of music, art and literature, his unerring good taste and his kindness of character all helped him in the successful performance of his difficult task, to the benefit of all artistic endeavors in this country.

The last months of his life, before sickness had overtaken him, were devoted to the sifting of his manuscripts and clippings. He wanted to select and prepare the best of them for eventual publication in book form. It was not granted to him to finish this work. In his will, however, he bequeathed his papers together with a substantial amount of money to the department of Germanic languages and literature of the University of Victoria. The department will consider it a labor of love and bring this work to the end its author envisaged.— Frederick Kriegel, 1332 May St.

Provide Something Better

The interference with the mail service is a disgusting example of labor dictatorship, which is ruining the world and country.

Governments are to blame for not standing against such interference, but, of course, they, too, are fleecing the populace.

Industrialists who have exercised brain and energy to achieve and provide should be encouraged instead of being interfered with. If labor disapproves of anything let it provide something better.

Labor has a right to strike, but not to interfere with these who wish to work.— Mrs. L. Pratt, Galt, Ont.

'An Age-Old Drive to Dominate Their Neighbors'

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG — Though newspaper headlines invariably depict Asian events in ideological terms, the turbulence currently nagging the Far East stems largely from tribal, religious, racial and regional causes that have deep historical roots.

In other words, the struggles between communism and anti-communism going on throughout Asia are more often than not the manifestation of traditional conflicts that belong to the realm of anthropology rather than political science.

The most obvious example of this atavism is now evident in Indochina, where the Vietnamese are reenacting their age-old drive to dominate their less dynamic neighbors.

Nothing illustrates this more vividly than the attitudes displayed by the Saigon Vietnamese and the Hanoi Vietnamese towards Cambodia and Laos.

South Vietnam's President Nguyen van Thieu has made it clear that his mission is to "protect" the unfortunate Cambodians — the implication being, of course, that he regards Cambodia as a potential Saigon satellite.

The North Vietnamese similarly feel that their destiny is to control Cambodia and Laos along with Vietnam. After all, their political movement was originally called the "Indochinese Communist Party" when it was founded in 1931.

That the Cambodians and Laotians are ultra-sensitive to Vietnamese ambitions has been underscored time and again in their public and private statements.

In an interview with this reporter a few years ago, for instance, the king of Laos dwelt at length on his fears of a Vietnamese invasion from the East. Significantly, he referred to the Vietnamese as "Annamites."

Prince Sihanouk, the former Cambodian chief of state, shared the same fears. Indeed, a member of his present government-in-exile once explained: "I hope the Vietnam war continues until the Vietnamese on both sides kill each other off."

Seen in this perspective, then, the confrontation in Indochina at the moment is less a fight between totalitarianism and freedom than a collision between rival Vietnamese factions for hegemony over the entire peninsula.

The Thais, who have long-standing designs on parts of Cambodia adjoining their borders, are also getting into the Indochina fray with the apparent intention of asserting ancient claims.

Other developments in Southeast Asia within recent years have also pointed up the extent to which present-day phenomena are actually revivals of tensions that reach back to the dim recesses of antiquity.

The massacres that swept across the Indonesian archipelago in 1965 and 1966 basically reflected complex local religious and clan feuds that bore only scant relation to the abortive communist coup d'etat that served to ignite that holocaust.

Ethnic stresses and strains underlie the troubles in countries as different as Malaysia and Burma and, as was revealed during Mao Tse-tung's tumultuous cultural revoltion, old family vendettas and regional frictions are still rife in China.

In large measure, the instability is symptomatic of the fact that many Asian lands have not yet attained nationhood and are constantly challenged by the threat of fragmentation.

The more energetic nationalists consider their national boundaries to be those circumscribed by the colonial powers that formerly ruled their areas. Thus the Vietnamese have staked out what used to be French Indochina while the Javanese have taken over all the territory once known as the Dutch East Indies.

Since the Second World War, when the process of decolonization began, the West has tried to guide the countries of Southeast Asia along the path of national development.

But western involvement in this part of the world rapidly became entangled in the cold war, with the result that the nationalist trend was distorted to conform to geopolitical labels concocted in Washington, Moscow and other capitals.

At present, however, it is plain that western attempts to manage Asia have been only marginally effective. For, as Kipling suggested a long time ago, taking up the "white man's burden" in the Orient is very much an exercise in futility.

The turmoil now shaking the region, therefore, is bound to persist as Asians seek to settle their own problems in their own way — which is the only way that these problems can be plausibly resolved.

A Collision Of 'Disasters'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Standing along with the Canadian Labor Congress and the Prices and Incomes Commission are the personalities who lead and symbolize them, Donald MacDonald and John Young.

It is crystal clear after last week's happenings that Donald MacDonald has a bitter concept, bordering on hate, for PIC and all its works ("a servile agency of the Government").

●

It is just as clear that the grinning Dr. Young tends to become the grimacing Young when organized labor enters his stream-of-mouth. He radiates a patronizing distaste for labor's negative and "stupid" resistance to his reasoning.

It's worth examining the question whether this standoff, so crippling to any achievement of voluntary controls in the economy, is solely on issues, or is an unfortunate matching of conflicting personalities at the root of much or all of the impasse. You can't go into the answer without jettisoning any "nice Nellie" neutrality.

Over the past year of observing Dr. Young and a longer period of following Donald MacDonald's leadership of the CLC, I've reached some firm opinions about each man. In shortest compass, I believe Young is a disaster and MacDonald another, though the extenuating circumstances are kinder.

●

The first point to make about Dr. John Young is that he has never been a great economist. His list of published works is very short and the impact of his work very slight.

Nor was he known in academic circles as a great teacher, who in the quiet of the university trained and equipped disciples for a major role in society.

Dr. Young had flirted with the Federal Liberals in the mid-60s over a possible candidacy. One present cabinet minister says that Young would have been into politics if some assurance had been forthcoming from Lester Pearson that his talents would be recognized immediately with a cabinet portfolio.

In sum, the Young picture: An aggressive, very confident man getting on in years without the equipment to be a seminal mind in his field and located just below the top in the frenetic whirl of university administration and politics in Wacky Bennett's B.C.

He takes the opportunity, starting from scratch an organization which is somehow independent of the government but not so independent or at arms-length as the Economic Council.

●

His associate cast was filled with: One "failed" politician, Gerin Lajoie, the token French-Canadian every Federal agency has to have; one "failed" civil servant, George Haythorne, who had run out of reputation except as a decent, kind man in the Department of Labor; and two relatively unknown and quiet workers in the bowels of bureaucracy, George Freeman and Bert Barrow, each of whom seems to have more credibility (from what I can gather) as economists than the other three commissioners.

Dr. Young was in a hurry to get into action.

He began to prod and prod. Further, he kept bringing up the subject of guidelines and voluntary controls, giving the impression that it would be easy for labor leaders to cooperate and if they didn't they were bad citizens.

●

My point is that Dr. Young decided immediately he took the job that he must play the organ publicly, loudly and often. Further, he took the limelight to himself, the other commissioners becoming backroom boys.

This could be a wise decision if the top man were a persuasive, attractive personality. When he isn't even fair at the game, it means there is no alternative to draw fire or to warm people — say as Harry Boyle has assisted Pierre Juneau with the CRTC.

YOUNG

If Dr. Young lacks tact and the ability to keep a silence while negotiations are under way, Donald MacDonald compounds the assurance of dissension by a remote, embattled, defensively-minded character. His capacity for warmth and enthusiasm and graciousness is low.

●

Frankly, the CLC is not capable of imaginative policies nor any flexibility in presenting a more appealing fact to the public or casting forth rebuttals with wit and irony, the kind of satirical jollying which would be most effective in deflating the simplified economic evangelism of Dr. Young and PIC.

What better illustration of a dearth of imagination and flexibility than the CLC's call for a mammoth national conference? Ugh!

MARIJUANA AND THE GIs

Taking Their Minds Off the War

By IAN WRIGHT
Manchester Guardian

"In this place," said the soldier with a grin, "you can blow your mind every night of the year."

In the language of the marijuana subculture familiar to most Americans under 30 but sadly baffling to most of the rest, the young soldier was saying that here in Vietnam cannabis, pot, the weed, giggle-smoke, grass, Mary Jane, call it what you will, is readily available and freely used.

This does not mean, as obscure Congressmen sometimes assert, that half the Army is permanently stoned or that the war is turning America's youth into drug addicts.

But as anyone who has spent time with the military knows, very many soldiers under 25, particularly those doing the fighting, use marijuana to relax and take their minds off the war.

Largely because smoking pot is illegal there has been a marked absence of good statistics. Undoubtedly the Army has played it down, saying, quite rightly, that most marijuana users picked up the habit before they came to Vietnam.

For some, pot is an antidote to fear. Since General Westmoreland's time most of the fighting has been done by small patrols, many of which can go for weeks without meeting the enemy, stumbling into an ambush, or kicking a booby trap. Then one day it happens. Your number comes up. Terror is in the unexpected.

Grunts (the expressive slang for an infantryman) on patrol tend not to use pot. Most of them have heard chilling stories of stoned soldiers who have blundered into deadly ambushes.

A young lieutenant confirmed this. "My platoon averages 23 men of whom maybe three did not use grass. Most of the fellows wouldn't allow anyone to smoke in the field. One soul brother did, but he was pretty unpopular."

An infantry captain who first came to Vietnam in 1967 told me: "In the field we had no problem. What I mean is I never noticed that any of my guys were stoned. It did not get in the way of what they had to do. I'm neutral as far as pot is concerned. You can have just as much trouble from alcohol."

But if there is a self-imposed prohibition in the field (and this varies from unit to unit), when troops return to their forward fire support bases the goof-butts light up.

These camps, often no more than clearings blasted out of the jungle to accommodate heavy artillery pieces, are makeshift and frequently uncomfortable. There is always a good chance they will be attacked and their guns pound away deafeningly into the night. The patrols come in to rest.

"Usually," said the lieutenant, "there's no beer at a fire support base. Maybe the officers in their tents have a couple of shots of liquor to keep their spirits up. The guys in the dugouts listen to music, smoke grass, and get pleasantly high. You can't blame them."

Another officer said: "You're got to use your sense in Vietnam. You can't pounce on guys for small things, otherwise you'll have trouble on your hands."

Although a lot of marijuana is smoked under these conditions, more is probably consumed in the big divisional base camps. Companies come in from the field and smoke to relax: the soldiers who live in the base camps smoke through sheer boredom. Sometimes they are tempted to turn to drugs stronger than marijuana. Some do, but at the moment narcotics seem to be used only by a very small minority. "Most guys," said a young sergeant from Brooklyn, "are not that stupid."

At these divisional base camps potheads are most likely to come up against authority. This means "them" — the men over 30, career officers or senior NCO's, whom they call "lifers."

Because the American Army has been so inflated by draftees, and young college graduate officers, who are civilians only in the service for the minimum length of time, lifers are in the minority.

Now while alcohol has long been the accepted escape route for the military establishment, pot is considered dangerous.

The lifers, who are the establishment, tend to lump all drugs together (apart from alcohol), equate them with crime, and, theoretically at least, take up an attitude which, if taken to its logical conclusion, would fill every military jail in Vietnam many times over.

In fact the incidence of cases involving marijuana known to the authorities is absurdly low (two per thousand men in 1969) and the conviction rate lower still.

This suggests either that the command is turning a blind eye to the very open activities of many young soldiers or that it doesn't care to tangle with them.

As in other aspects of military discipline in this very hard and complicated war, there is a degree of sensible accommodation to which neither side cares to admit.

Procuring marijuana in Vietnam is easier than getting a drink in London. There is no closing time.

"In every camp in the country," an army doctor confided, "I bet you can get a joint within five minutes." The weed grows wild, the weed is cultivated; Vietnamese rarely use it but since the Americans arrived they have discovered a new cash crop.

With three harvests a year, the Mekong Delta is the marijuana bowl of Vietnam. Until police moved in to destroy crops, some farmers were giving up rice and turning to cannabis.

But destruction urged by the army and United States federal agents hardly touches the supply. "We call it Vietnam's cottage industry," one of the Americans in charge of drug suppression told me with a grin.

Across the street from where I am writing there is a cigarette stand. If you ask for Pall Mall—"the very strong ones"—you will get an expertly wrapped Pall Mall pack, "cellophane" and all. But inside, each cigarette will have had its tobacco taken out and finely manicured marijuana put in its place. It will cost little more than an ordinary packet of cigarettes in England.

Very sensibly the army puts most of its effort into education. Most units have admirable "amnesty programs." If a soldier feels he needs treatment—in some units even after he has been apprehended by the law—he can go to the surgeon or the chaplain without fear of charges or notes on his record.

A survey made by the surgeon of the 173 Airborne Brigade concluded by saying: "What we have seen clinically is a majority of rather incapable, frustrated, poorly educated, passive-aggressive personalities complicating the many problems they already have by becoming involved with the use of marijuana."

But another brigade surgeon showed the army's other face. "I regard the use of drugs as just another symptom," he said. "in Vietnam all there is for most people to do is what they don't want to do. I've no doubt that pot aggravates a man's existing psychotic problems."

Then he added as a parting shot: "But if I was five years younger I'd probably be smoking the stuff myself."

'...Hey, Skinny! Come for a Swim...'

By ART STOTT

The young towhead who visited us over the weekend has been enrolled in a competitive swimming club.

"It's not," her mother explained, "that we expect her to develop into an Olympic team member. But she can swim 25 metres reasonably well now. If at the end of the season she can swim 50 metres as well or better, that's a gain in her swimming."

★ ★ ★

Her debut was startling. The young miss lined up with others of her age on the starting line, engrossed in the sheer wonder of being allowed to race. The signal sounded and the group took off — all but the towhead. She was still gazing around, checking to see if her mother was watching and a bit bemused by the whole thing. Finally she realized the race was on, jumped in and came last. "But only," as her parent explained, "by the distance she lost at the start. She'll learn."

Her young brother, two years her junior, is still with the beginners. A boy with a vocabulary and excellent articulation, he talks as good a swim as anyone in his age group. It's only when he's in over his knees that the difference between word and deed is fully apparent.

Eventually he'll move off under his own power in the water and we'll all heave a sigh of relief.

We take it for granted that every child who is physically able — and some who are handicapped — can swim and has the opportunity to learn here. In the last 24 years, the school board has been providing courses for Grade 5 pupils and, according to the authorities, enjoys about a 90 per cent success record in teaching them to swim with varying proficiency.

In addition there are other arrangements made for public children's swimming groups as well as private. The picture has changed somewhat since the pioneering days of Capt. Ian St. Clair, who taught all-comers in a logged-around pool somewhere in Selkirk water.

★ ★ ★

In my childhood I enjoyed the tuition of Fred Harling at the Gorge. Others were learning under Ralph Alcock. Any of the swim clubs, the V.A.S.C., V.I.A.A., Elks and the Victoria Y would help most who asked. And during his career from junior Y leader to physical director, Archie McKinnon has launched thousands of youngsters into the element.

Today the development seems almost as natural as the transformation of the frog's eggs into tadpoles — and the way they do it now makes the process simple.

As a very small boy I remember far different techniques. Your parents decided you should learn to swim. So they took you to the beach, where the water was a few degrees above freezing. They'd wade out waist deep, and you, the kid, would be in up to your neck, shivering and yelling like murder. The parent would put a hand under your chin, tell you to kick like a frog and sweep your arms in normal breast stroke. You'd slip off the hand, swallow water and come up yelling harder. The parent, tired of the whole thing, would apply the silencer—holding you under just long enought to let you know your noise wasn't appreciated — and then lug you to shore, admitting you weren't ready yet. They they'd send you somewhere to learn to swim.

There were numerous teaching methods. Boys older than you and able to swim, sometimes just threw you into deep water. The practice was reprehensible, uninformed and dangerous. But I never heard of a kid drowning from being thrown in.

Then there was the waterwings stage, on inflatable floats that went under your arms and gradually lost their air — not very good and inclined to create a dependence. Or you could be dangled on a stout cord at the end of a pole, held just high enough to allow you to breathe, a bit wetly and in terror.

★ ★ ★

Now the methods are more uniform. Preferably in small groups, the children are taken into the water — warm water — up to their waists, encouraged to duck down and pick things off bottom, to familiarize themselves with water in the eyes and maybe in the ears. Then comes the jellyfish float to prove to them that a body with air in the lungs can stay at least partly on the surface. You learn your push-offs and glides after that and work in your crawl kick and arm action, learning to breathe in the later stages.

The teachers have made it simple, water-shyness is on the wane and, under good supervision, there's little excuse other than some of the more serious physical handicaps for not learning.

Eventually the child can join a competitive club, stand gazing around when the starter's gun goes off, and learn about that too. With summer here, it's pleasing to old floaters like me to find there are so many chances for the youngsters to become proficient. If they don't, they've no one to blame but themselves.

HYDRO-CARBON-EATING microbes being tested here could clean up the polluted shoreline of Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay, according to Dr. James Zajic, biochemical engineer at the University of Western Ontario. Zajic says the organisms could handle the cleanup eight times as fast as natural processes. (CP Wirephoto.)

White Paper Hit

Husky Oil Ltd. believes proposals in the white paper on taxation would slow Canada's rate of economic growth, lessen individual incentives to work, and increase government influence in private activities of individuals and corporations.

"In general, there would be a less dynamic, more centralized Canada," the independent oil company says.

"The price of this deadening of activity and growth is high. If the economy grows at only four per cent annually instead of five per cent, the gross national product in the year 2000 will be 25 per cent less — which means 25 per cent less wellbeing for all Canadians."

Husky entered its objections in a submission to the Commons standing committee on finance, trade and economic affairs.

The presentation advocated an evolutionary development of the existing tax system, "building on a proven base instead of a revolutionary adoption of a new system that is untried, and the consequences of which are unknown."

Marathon Realty

Marathon Realty Co. Ltd. announced plans in Toronto Tuesday for a $30,000,000 residential-commercial development on Yonge Street in tre mid-town area about two miles north of the Lake Ontario shoreline.

The project will span a railway, which will be covered at a cost of about $1,000,000 to fit into the scheme.

The development on a 19-acre site will be dominated by a 35-storey tower of luxury apartments and shops.

When completed, it will provide accommodation for about 3,000 persons.

Marathon is the real estate arm of Canadian Pacific Investments and has its head office in Calgary.

Cunningham Drugs

Cunningham Drug Stores of Vancouver has a net profit of $764,800 in the year ending March 31, it was disclosed Tuesday in the annual report.

Net profit for the previous year was $760,300.

Earning per share was 92 cents, compared to 93 cents on fewer shares a year ago.

Datatech Plans Information Paper

Shareholders' questions about the status of Datatech Systems (Canada) Ltd., whose stock was suspended from trading at Vancouver stock Exchange early this year, may be answered in an information circular being prepared.

The annual meeting, twice postponed, could take place around the end of next month, depending of when shareholders receive the circular.

A solicitor acting for the Saanich-based computer firm said part of the scheduling relies on the postal situation, but he hoped the circular would precede the meeting by about two weeks.

Although public trading in the stock was halted, it is understood some private exchanges have taken place.

The suspension occurred pending clarification of the company's financial affairs, including a transaction described in a previous circular as an investment of funds subscribed in a public offering of shares.

Meanwhile, an inquiry by the attorney-general's department was undertaken, results of which were not revealed.

Dividend Reduced

Price Co. Ltd. of Quebec said Tuesday it will reduce its quarterly common-stock dividend, normally paid Aug. 1 to 8¾ cents a share from 10 cents.

"The freeing of the Canadian dollar is having a serious impact on Price Co.'s earnings from both forest products and mining," the company said in a release.

The release also said that the level at which the Canadian dollar settles "will determine future newsprint levels and could encourage major expansions by United States and Scandinavian producers at a time when capital expenditures by the Canadian newsprint industry to meet future market demand will have to be drastically curtailed."

Gremlin Scores

Gremlin, the first of the new North American subcompact cars and the first to be built in Canada, has been an instant success, says American Motors (Canada) Ltd.

In the two months since the auto went on sale April 1, the entire output of 2,580 Gremlins to be built at the company's Brampton, Ont., plant in the 1970 model year has been snapped up by dealers, L. G. Rice, president, said today. New orders are being filled from dealer stocks.

"The Gremlin has proven there is a definite market in Canada for a North American small car," Rice said.

Suppliers Used as Banks In Tight Money Market

CALGARY (CP) — Current economic conditions may force an increasing number of suppliers to charge interest on overdue accounts, says March Wallace of Toronto, president of the Canadian Credit Mens Association.

Some customers have been using suppliers as bankers by deferring payments on accounts due, he said in an interview and suppliers, mainly in the hard goods field, had begun to charge interest of 1½ per cent per month on overdue accounts.

"Our information indicates that accounts due on a 30-day basis now are averaging payment in 58 days.

"The lag in payments would indicate that many customers now find money hard to come by and are using suppliers as bankers."

Wallace, general credit manager for Colgate-Palmolive Ltd., said he does not exppect any significant improvement in the credit payment situation in the last half of 1970.

He said the policy of charging interest on outstanding balances, now primarily applied to hard goods, may be adopted by suppliers in other fields.

CNR SUBSIDIARY IN TROUBLE

U.S. Aids Ailing Firms

By ROBERT SAMUELSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. federal reserve board Tuesday took prompt — but unexpected — action to help banks provide funds to companies short of cash.

The surprise move appeared to be an outgrowth of last Sunday's bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad, which couldn't raise adequate working capital to meet its bills.

Before the late afternoon announcement, stocks declined sharply, reflecting fears that many companies might be squeezed by a "liquidity" crisis, according to analysts. The Dow Jones industrial average of companies traded on the New York Stock Exchange dropped 18 points to 698.11.

The FED's action was seen as an effort to calm financial markets, and reflected pledges by FED chairman Arthur Burns — repeated by President Nixon last week — that "there will be enough money and credit to meet future needs."

What the FED did was remove interest rate ceilings banks are permitted to pay on sums of more than $100,000 on deposit between 30 and 89 days. The statutory ceilings now stant at 6¼ per cent for deposits with maturities between 30 and 59 days, and 6½ per cent for sums with maturities between 59 and 89 days.

The suspension of the ceilings should allow banks to attract more deposits from companies with excess cash and reloan the funds to firms with immediate needs for more working capital.

For the last year, many companies have resorted to "commercial paper" — a form of short-term note — to raise working capital. Rates on these types of loans consistently exceeded 6½ per cent, luring many investors with free funds to withdraw their money from banks.

Penn Central's declaration of bankruptcy, however, froze repayments on about $83.5 million in commercial paper, according to government figures. In these circumstances, analysts say, companies with excess cash might now be more selective in committing their money to commercial paper lending.

In its announcement, the FED cited "uncertainties in financial markets" as a justification for the move. Bankers said rates on the 30 to 90 day deposits might fluctuate between 7½ and 8 per cent to be competitive with current commercial paper.

The FED also argued that the measure would "not interfere" with the government's anti-inflationary policies, because any increase in bank loans "would not constitute an increase in total credit flows, to the extent that they simply represented a transfer of borrowing from other financial avenues, as for example the commercial paper market."

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which regulates state-chartered banks, announced changes similar to the FED's, which do not affect $100,000 deposits of more than 90 days.

Meanwhile Tuesday, the administration continued its drive for measures to help the nation's railroads by formally introducing its proposal to have the department of transportation guarantee up to $750 million to ailing carriers.

The fate of the legislation appeared uncertain. In the House, Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D-W.Va.), chairman of the House interstate and foreign commerce committee, agreed to co-sponsor the measure, but his Senate counterpart, Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.), chairman of the Senate commerce committee, did not.

Thus, in the Senate, the bill has only Republican sponsors. Hearings are expected to begin soon.

EPNN HEARINGS

The Penn Central bankruptcy came up Tuesday at a hearing of the Senate Subcommittee on Surface Transportation.

At the hearing, Sen Vance Hartke (D-Ind.), chairman of the subcommittee, asked members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which regulates the nation's railroads, for the names of financially-weak railroads that might apply for loan guarantees if the administration's proposal were to become law.

The I.C.C. did not single out specific railroads, but it did supply a list of carriers' 1969 financial results. That list showed that more than a dozen carriers finished the year with a deficit in their net operating income, meaning that they failed to cover the daily expenses of running the railroad from passengers and freight revenues.

Any payment of principal and interest on long term debt would have been a further drain on the company's resources.

Aside from Penn Central, which had a $67 million operating deficit, this list included the following major railroads: The Grand Trunk Western (American subsidiary of the Canadian National Railroad), $17 million; The Chicago and Northwestern, $18.3 million; the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Pacific, $10.1 million; the Rock Island Railroad, $7.8 million; the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, $1.3 million; the Western Pacific, $44,000; and the Northwestern Pacific, $76,000.

Profile: what kind of man buys a car with an ornament like this?

Mercedes-Benz takes a close look at a different kind of automobile buyer. One who isn't swept off his feet by hood-scoops, fancy stripes, and chromium plate.

IT is very nearly impossible to fit the Mercedes-Benz owner within a particular socio economic group. He may be a school teacher, or a stock-broker. But when it comes to his basic attitudes, we can make some fairly accurate assumptions.

1. Our kind of man is a perfectionist and a seeker of quality. He regrets that the word "quality" has lost much of its true meaning in recent years through hackneyed use.

2. For that reason, our man generally dislikes puffed-up, showy advertising. He abhors attempts to manipulate his good taste and common sense. If his car has to have advertising, he wants that advertising to make sense.

3. A Mercedes-Benz owner usually feels closer to his car than does an owner of another make. His car is an extension of his personality. He feels that both his car, and himself, are comfortably above average.

4. By owning a Mercedes-Benz he can express his individuality, and status, without feeling or suggesting that he's a show-off.

5. How does our man feel behind the wheel? For one thing, he feels comfortable. He probably knows more about his car's superb engineering features than owners of other cars. He knows why he feels comfortable. The seats in his car were designed with the help of an orthopedic surgeon. And he appreciates their beautiful upholstery.

6. He feels secure, too. He knows that a Mercedes-Benz has non-fade disc brakes on all four wheels. An articulated rear axle designed to keep the wheels on the ground — no matter how hard he drives, or how rough the road. A collapsible steering column for safety. And a specially strengthened rattle-free body that could save his, and his passengers' lives, in a roll-over accident.

Now, how does the mantle of a Mercedes-Benz owner fit you? If you are still not absolutely sure, send for our illustrated brochure. And arrange for a test drive in one of our 1970 models on display at the Mercedes-Benz dealers shown below.

You may be one of the reasons why "our kind of man" is steadily increasing in numbers!

Send for the free, full-colour brochure that tells all about the new cars from Mercedes-Benz.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

An active Pacific storm moving towards the B.C. coast threatened rain and gales on the northern coast today. The remainder of the province was mostly sunny, although isolated showers developed in some sections of the interior during the afternoon. The disturbance will gradually move its way southeastward during the next 24 hours, spreading clouds and precipitations.

'Buggy Underpasses' Vetoed

ST. JACOB'S, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government has refused to consider building "buggy underpasses" for members of the Mennonites religious sect who fear a new highway will cut their community in half.

Mennonites are concerned about the relocation of Highway 85 and its effect on this community near Kitchener. They fear that Mennonites living on the west side of the two-lane highway will be isolated from their churches on the east side.

Dr. R. S. Dorney, professor of environmental studies at the University of Waterloo, wrote to the highways department outlining the problems faced by the Mennonites, who shun modern ways and still use horses and buggys to travel.

But Dr. Dorney said today I. C. Campbell, a planning engineer for the highways department, had replied in a letter that no provision has been made to allow buggy traffic to cross the highway.

Flower Club Holds Show

H. J. Brown, 1198 Munro Street, founder of the Esquimalt Garden Club, was made a life member, at the club's annual flower show held Saturday.

Prizes for the high aggregate in the novice class and for the best rose in the show were won by K. Barnes, a newcomer from Winnipeg.

Other prize winners were J. Moir, high aggregate in the show; H. J. Brown, high aggregate for members only; Mrs. M. Worsfold, high aggregate floral arrangements, open; Mrs. J. Macfarlane, high aggregate floral arrangements; Bruce Knight, miniature gardens.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Five days in a row the old Wyoming cowboy has been laughing at me. The winds have been blowing steadily and fiercely off the desert, and the swimming pool is right in the path of the blowing eucalyptus leaves. Old Jeff thinks I ought to quit cussing the wind, relax and think about our ancestors who liked the winds because wind was power for their windmills.

Windmills probably started civilization on its way to the invention and use of machinery. Jeff said that when men got the idea of using winds for power they had to invent gears, levers and wheels that regulated the use of the windmills. "Who knows," he said, "whether the automobile would have ever been developed if it weren't for the windmills."

The temperate zones of the world led the way. In Holland, and in Wisconsin and Iowa here in the United States, where the winds blow freely and steadily, most of the farms had windmills before the gasoline motor was invented. And, of course, ranchers in the west use windmills to pump water for cattle.

'BLACK MONTH' FREEZES ACTION

GANGTOK, Sikkim (The London Observer) — Nothing whatever is being allowed to happen here in this little Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim for 28 days, at least so far as humans are able to control events.

All organized occasions already arranged have been cancelled and no new ones will be fixed until the present month in the Tibetan calendar is over. Nor will any important decisions be taken, in domestic affairs or on matters of state.

This is because the Buddhist Lamas have declared that a "black month" is at hand, which means that every prospect is inauspicious and that any new venture started at this time is bound to fail. Among events which have had to be cancelled is the inaugural session of the new council formed after the recent elections.

THE EXECUTIVE JET.™
IT'S BASED ON THE PLEASURE PRINCIPLE.

Fourteen times a day CP Air Executive Jets streak across Canada, with a single mission: To give the travelling businessman plenty of pleasure.

And since one man's pleasure is not necessarily another man's pleasure, we let you choose your pleasure. (And let a smiling stewardess in a new summer outfit from Eaton's bring it to you.)

We know some men aren't happy unless they're working. For those men we carry dictating equipment, stationery, the Financial Post, Fortune, and the Wall Street Journal. So they can set up an office away from the office while flying. (Even in economy.)

For the man who would rather play than work, we carry dozens of pleasurable distractions. For instance, all Executive Jets carry grown-up games like Instant Insanity and Soma. And hard-cover best-seller books, and men's magazines like Playboy.

Perhaps your pleasure is to do absolutely nothing. Well, we can't think of a better place to do it. The atmosphere on board is always relaxed and informal.

For one thing, our stewardesses look like girls, not like army corporals. Thanks to Eaton's, Canada's most fashion-conscious department store.

With Eaton's help we've put our girls into "non-uniforms" that will change as the seasons change and fashions change. For example, that's our brand-new summer non-uniform the girls are wearing. If you like it, you can buy one exactly like it, at most of Eaton's fine stores.

Women can find happiness aboard the Executive Jet, too. They won't have to dictate or read Fortune to have fun. There are dozens of other things to do.

So, next time you're planning a flight within Canada, ask your travel agent to book you on a CP Air Executive Jet.

It's the pleasurable way to fly.

(P.S.: Taking the Executive Jet to Toronto or Calgary? Now you can check your bags straight through to your room at the Royal York or Palliser Hotel. It's a new service. Try it!)

Ottawa to Try Out Language Commission Recommendations

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to try out the recommendations of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism to create French-language units in the public service.

Announcing the decision in the Commons Tuesday, Prime Minister Trudeau said the new policy will not lead to creation of French-Canadian "ghettos" in the federal service.

The government would proceed with the understanding that the units "should not be considered an end in themselves and that we should have an open and experimental attitude towards their potential advantages and disadvantages."

He noted that such units already operate in branches of the public service in Quebec, in some departments in Ottawa and in the Canadian forces. The government will proceed with pilot projects designed to test the idea more fully "over the next year or so" in a number of departments.

Mr. Trudeau's statement, coming seven months after release of the royal commission's report on the "Work World," indicated acceptance of almost all recommendations on the public service and the armed forces.

Opposition Leader Stanfield criticised the fact that the government will not create a public service language authority, recommended to ensure development of both official languages in the public service.

Mr. Trudeau's statement pinpointed to the creation last year in the secretary of state's department of an unofficial but similar official languages branch.

Mr. Stanfield argued the government was side-stepping a debate in Parliament over its policy by dropping the one recommendation that would have required legislative action. He insisted the government should bring the matter before the Commons.

Mr. Trudeau told the House the goal of the reforms is, in the words of the commission, "a real equality of opportunity, ensuring that the face of speaking English or French would be neither a help nor a handicap to a person seeking entry into the institutions affecting our individual and collective life."

To that end, he said, the government was also willing to accept a recommendation that federal planning and advisory boards, "task forces" and similar groups have balanced participation by both Francophones and anglophones.

"This in no way represents a modification of the merit principle," he said.

Instead, it would open the federal service to "qualified Francophone candidates whose knowledge of English is limited. It is a pool of talent from which the federal public service has been largely cut off."

Mr. Trudeau noted that many recommendations involving use of French in private industry in Quebec are beyond the jurisdiction of the government. But it would do what it could to promote their acceptance.

Cabinet Approves Sunday Drinking for B.C.

would be wise to have one because they are the one certain form of tamper-proof identification for drinkers.

The government intends to enforce drinking age laws more strictly once the cards have been distributed widely, he said.

Peterson indicated that the "pushing" of alcoholic beverages is to be discouraged by the government, as exemplified by the restriction on serving more than one drink at a time.

Asked whether he considered advertising of liquor as a form of pushing, Peterson said yes, but declined to speculate on what further liquor law changes might be made by legislation.

Advertising rules could only be changed by statute in the legislature, he said, unlike the changes made today by cabinet amendment of liquor regulations.

Peterson said a Morrow commission recommendation for elimination of laws governing drinking in public places — such as at picnics or on beaches — was not given much consideration at this time.

But he said easing of rules governing licensed premises with patio-type serving areas has been going on for some time.

A further change announced today prohibits the giving of samples by manufacturers or representatives.

Liquor stores and premises will be allowed to remain open during municipal byelections.

Cabarets or clubs must ensure that patrons vacate the premises within half an hour after closing time.

Asked whether the government is going ahead with a commission recommendation for a crash program of alcoholism treatment, Peterson said the government's change in approach to alcoholism — treating it as a disease rather than an offence — has begun the process of treating alcoholism.

Among the commission proposals getting no action was one that liquor be served in hotel rooms.

Peterson said the government will keep a close eye on Sunday drinking.

"We won't be allowing people to drink all day Sunday without eating," he said.

Peterson said the changes announced today mean that the government has dealt with the "major recommendations" of the Morrow commission.

Peterson said the permitting of women to serve drinks in all licensed premises is in compliance with the Human Rights Act introduced last year.

Cost of identification cards will be $1.50. Peterson said he will be the first to go down and get one.

Birth certificates would be useful in making an affidavit as to correct age, he said, noting that it is a serious offence to swear to an incorrect birth date.

Operators of licensed premises will be within their rights to refuse to serve anyone of uncertain age eligibility if proper identification can't be produced.

Non-residents will be able to acquire such cards by the same means as residents — going to the bank branch to get the card and validating it at a liquor store.

Dent Defended On Accusation

Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton, the president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, is not an enemy of the federal government, his executive assistant Allen Rowe said this morning in answer to criticism by Mayor Courtney Haddock of Victoria.

Speaking for Dr. Dent who was in hospital in Edmonton this week, Rowe said the mayor has never permitted party politics to influence his civic duties.

Haddock Tuesday said CFMM made a mistake when it elected Dent as its 1970 president.

Rowe said the previous president of the CFMM, Halifax Mayor Allan O'Brien, was also a member of the NDP.

"Under his presidency, the mileage gained by the CFMM was greater than at any other time," Rowe said.

Rowe said Dent told him he did not understand what Haddock meant by calling him an enemy of the federal government.

"Does Haddock mean that the president of the CFMM should be of the same political stripe as the governing party in Ottawa?" Rowe asked.

North B.C. Centres Feel Small Quakes

Three shallow earthquakes centered south of the Queen Charlotte Islands were felt throughout a widespread area of northern British Columbia today, but there were no reports of damage or injury.

G. C. Roger, of the seismology division at Victoria's Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, said the largest of the three earthquakes was recorded at 6:10 this morning with a reading of about seven on the open-end Richter scale.

The first quake was recorded at 12:31 last night with a reading of about six and the last, the largest of a series of after shocks, was recorded at 10:18 this morning with a magnatude of four.

Roger said no tidal waves had been generated by the quakes which occurred 430 miles north of Victoria.

Parking Lot Crash Injures 4 Persons

A two-car collision in a parking lot Tuesday sent four persons to Royal Jubilee Hospital, most of them suffering only minor injuries.

Cars driven by Marilyn King, 43, of 845 Darwin, and Ian Ross Thomas, 21, of 1717 Sheridan, collided in the Hillside Shopping Centre Parking lot at about noon.

Sharron King, 15, Andrea King, 5, and Mrs. King were all treated for cuts, bruises and shock and released from hospital.

Ben Scheffer, 17, of 1707 Carnegie, was admitted to hospital with possible chest and spinal injuries, but hospital officials said today he is in good condition. He was a passenger in the Thomas' car.

Thomas suffered cut hands but refused medical assistance, police said.

Probe Starts

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government, the Canadian Wildlife Service and British Columbia Hydro are conducting an on-site investigation of the detrimental effects from lower water levels in the Peace-Athabasca rivers delta region, it was announced today.

Survey Says Kent State Deaths Sparked U.S. Student Strikes

CHICAGO (AP) — The killing of four Kent State University students in a clash with the Ohio National Guard, not U.S. action in Cambodia, precipitated the first nationwide student strike last month, Urban Research Corp. reported Tuesday.

The United States' involvement in the war in Southeast Asia provided the focal point for protest, the Chicago-based private research organization said, but Kent State gave it impetus.

Strikes and boycotts hit campuses at the rate of 20 a day following President Nixon's April 30 announcement of U.S. troop movements into Cambodia, the report said. But strike actions occurred at 100 or more schools each day for the four days following the May 4 Kent State shooting, it continued.

And in spite of rioting, firebombings, arson and National Guard callups that captured the headlines, Urban Research's report said, "one dominant characteristic of the national student strike was the dedication of participants to work for change through the legislative process, legitimate channels and in a nonviolent manner."

Violence occurred on fewer than five per cent of the 760 involved campuses, the report said, compared with an average of 23 per cent in the less widespread student protests of two previous years.

Nevertheless, despite emphasis on non-violence, "injuries were reported for more than 100 demonstrators, 28 policemen and two national guardsmen" in addition to the deaths of six students—two at Jackson State College in Mississippi.

PROTESTS SET RECORD

John Naisbitt, president of Urban Research, said: "In spite of Cambodia, without the Kent States deaths, there would have been no national student strike. Protests in the days immediately following the President's announcement followed the same pattern as . . . the preceding two years. But the 100-a-day new campus protests . . . following the student fatalities at Kent State are unprecedented in our history."

The subsequent killing of two Negro students at Jackson State by Mississippi state troopers May 13 had little impact, the report said.

"In the past, black students and black issues were involved in a majority of student protests," it said. "Black students in general did not participate in the 1970 national student strike."

Naisbitt commented: "The deaths of four white students escalated years of student unrest to historic heights that shocked the nation; the deaths of two black students under similar circumstances had little effect on an essentially white student strike."

Urban Research Corporation, formed two years ago, monitors trends on the domestic scene, and for fees, prepares reports for groups and institutions. It plans to publish, for sale, its report on the 1970 student strike.

Gordon Head Awards Day Its Last

Gordon Head Junior Secondary's awards day Friday was special in more ways than one.

It marked the end of the school's 10-year history.

This year it separates into two schools, Cedar Hill and Arbutus. Guests on stage for the awards included former principal J. H. Downard, who was given a standing ovation by the students.

The George Little trophy for academic excellence was presented to Dorothy Awmack. The Trevellick citizenship trophy went to Maureen Nuttall and Sonya Lukaitis won the Saanich Diamond Jubilee Tray for excellence in the field of arts.

LEADERSHIP

The students chose Philip Blake for the leadership trophy and the J. H. Downard Trophy for best all-round student was awarded to Ian MacLean. Sportsman and woman of the year were Rick Wardle and Coleen Griffin.

St. Michael's School held its 60th annual prize-giving ceremony Tuesday and Mark Destrube won five awards for best student, math, reading, merit and the art and music cup.

Eric Bapty won the citizenship prize and Robert Fraumeni got the service award.

BEST PROGRESS

Tony Carter was rewarded for making the best progress in games and sports while Kane Striath was named St. Michael's outstanding sportsman of the year.

At Norfolk House School's recent closing ceremony, the Dereham award for all aspects of school life went to Margaret Ann MacLure. Ann Poulton won the Hammond cup for merit.

Stephanie Olynyk was awarded the grads of 1963 cup, Wendy Smith won the Charles Heisterman cup, and Brenda Cunningham won the Prior cup.

Nicki Gore-Langton won the Burridge Cup while Gail Stirling got the Young cup.

Race Dates Approved By Cabinet

The British Columbia government Friday authorized the holding of horse races in six communities this summer with parimutuel betting.

Authorized by cabinet order-in-council to hold the races are: Williams Lake Stampede Association, Williams Lake, June 29, 30 and July 1; Princeton Racing Days Association, Princeton, July 10, 11; Vernon Jockey Club Ltd., Vernon, July 24, 25; Victoria Jockey Club Ltd., Prince George, Aug. 19, 20, 21, 22; Vancouver Island Quarter Horse Racing Association Ltd., Sandown Park, Aug. 22, 28, 29; Kamloops Exhibition Association, Kamloops, Sept. 2, 3, 4, 5, 7.

Ontario MPPs Demand Probe Into Police

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition members of the Ontario legislature renewed demands Tuesday night for a public inquiry into the relationship between senior provincial police officers and a businessman with a criminal record.

The demands were made in a legislature committee meeting after Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said investigation had shown that "no sinister implications" could be drawn from past social contacts between OPP officers and George Clinton Duke, 65, of Oakville, Ont.

Mr. Wishart's statement was the result of an earlier demand for an investigation made by Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park), who charged June 4 that Mr. Duke had contacts with three Canadian members of the Mafia.

The attorney-general acknowledged that 11 senior OPP officers, including Commissioner Eric Silk, had visited the Duke home socially—sometimes to attend promotional demonstrations of lawn equipment later purchased by the force from Mr. Duke. The visits occurred over a five-year period ending in 1968.

He also said that two OPP superintendents had visited Mr. Duke even after Commissioner Silk had become aware of the businessman's criminal record and had ordered a stop to such social contacts.

MAY BE DISCIPLINED

The 65-year-old president of Duke Lawn Equipment Ltd., was deported to Canada from the United States in 1942 after being sentenced to prison in 1929 in connection with a $400,000 jewel robbery in New York state.

Mr. Wishart indicated that the two superintendents, Albert Wilson and A. M. Rodger, might be faced with disciplinary action.

Commissioner Silk, who was present during the committee meeting, said Supt. Rodger had thought his order was "personal-type" advice and had told Supt. Wilson. But the order was not relayed to other officers.

Mr. Wishart said Mr. Duke had acknowledged knowing the three men named by Dr. Shulman as having Mafia connections, but only in connection with his business.

The men named were John A. Papalia, 45, Donald (Red) LeBarre, and Dante Gabriel Gasbarrini, 48, all of Hamilton. Mr. Papalia and Mr. Gasbarrini were convicted on narcotics charges in Vancouver in 1949 and were named during a United States Senate crime committee hearing in 1963 as being involved in Mafia narcotics activities.

CITES HEROIN CASE

Mr. Wishart said Mr. Duke has conducted himself in a "businesslike manner" since his return to Canada and has not engaged in any "illegal activity."

Eddie Sargent (L—Grey-Bruce) described Mr. Gasbarrini as a convicted heroin courier who had been linked with the police seizure in Oakville last year of what Mr. Sargent called the biggest haul of heroin in Canada.

Mr. Wishart replied that Mr. Gasbarrini's background is known to police and that he and the other two "so-called Mafia figures" have been under constant surveillance.

Dr. Shulman called again for a public inquiry, saying the attorney-general's statement contained "too many inconsistencies."

Russian Fishing Fleet Devastatingly Efficient

By PETER MEDWID

Twenty years ago a Russian high-seas fishing fleet did not exist.

Today the Hammer and Sickle is a common sight on the West Coast and the vessels which make up the fleet are new, modern and devastatingly efficient.

With this dramatic buildup of the Russian fleet—now the largest in the world—has come a corresponding increase of fear among Canadian fishermen of the threat to Pacific salmon and groundfish stocks.

The Pacific Trollers' Association has mounted a campaign seeking federal action to limit foreign fishing on Canada's continental shelf and federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis has voiced support for an exclusive Canadian fishing zone extending to the edge of the shelf.

West Coast fishermen maintain the Russians, as well as taking groundfish—hake and perch—are netting salmon.

The Russians have been coming to the West Coast in large numbers since 1966. A total of 107 ships were sighted in that year, 85 in 1967 and 55 in 1968. No figures are available for 1969 but U.S. fisheries officials predict a marked increase in the number of ships in the Pacific as the Russians have decreased the number of ships on the Atlantic.

Davis, during an aerial survey of the fleet last summer, said the ships at night "looked like a floating city." It is estimated by U.S. officials that more than 15,000 Russians manned the ships seen off the coast last year.

This "floating city" is now located off the mouth of the Columbia River and should, within the next three weeks, begin moving to the fishing banks off British Columbia.

The movement will more than likely bring renewed cries from Canadian fishermen for protection of salmon on the Big Bank, located approximately 50 miles off Bamfield.

B.C. trollers have complained in past years that Russian draggers and trawlers have harassed the Canadian fleet, citing near misses; anchors being snagged by Soviet nets; and lack of right-of-way on the high seas.

Canadian fisheries officials will be keeping a close watch on the fleet.

These drawings of the most common type of Russian fishboat seen off the coast were compiled by the National Fisherman of the U.S. and issued in 1968.

The Fisherman states there may be inaccuracies in some cases because of translation difficulties.

VESSEL TYPE: Base Ship—VESSEL CLASS: Severodvinsk (PRKS)

Length overall: 508 feet

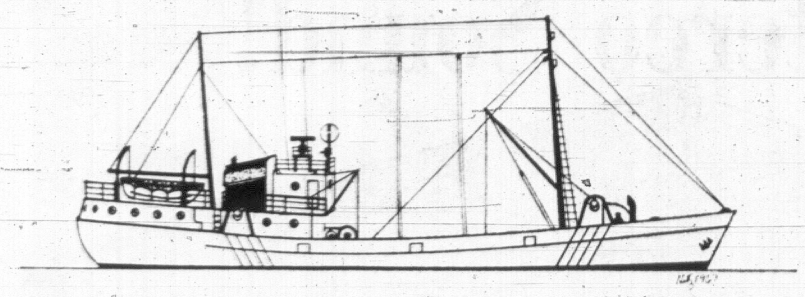
Deadweight: 9,300 tons
Gross tonnage: 10,036
Propulsion type: steam, diesel oil
Horsepower: 5,000
Number of screws: 2
Fresh water capacity: 71,018 pounds
Speed: 13 knots
Number in crew: 140 - 257
Where built: Poland
When built: 1958-63
Number built: 11 to 13
Endurance: 60 days
Hold capacity: 358,444 pounds
Fuel capacity: 160,858 pounds

Type of fishing gear: None.

Production capacity: This ship was designed to supply a fleet of SRT's (drifters) with fuel, water, provisions, salt, barrels, fishing gear, social and medical services, as well as to receive the catches. She can chill about 200 tons of lightly salted herring per day. She can carry about 5,000 tons of herring in barrels in five holds that are refrigerated at 32 degrees.

Remarks: It is believed that this class is the world's first designed and built as a base ship for herring drifters, all others have been converted cargo ships.



VESSEL TYPE: Side Trawler (Drift Trawler) VESSEL CLASS: SRT-400 (CRT)

Length overall: 125-144 feet
Beam: 24-25 feet
Disp. tonnage (loaded-light): 385-500 tons

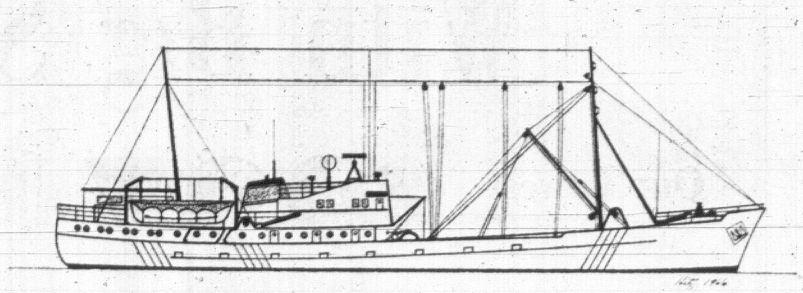
When built: 1948-59
No. built: 1,000
Endurance: 25-30 days
Hold capacity: 190-200 tons
Fuel capacity: unknown

Type of fishing gear: This vessel generally trawls with a 69 or 82 foot trawl. Trawling is conducted from either the port or starboard side. The vessel, when drift or gill net fishing uses nets of various lengths and numbers.

Production capacity: The holds have no freezing or chilling equipment so the catch must be delivered to the processing ship.

Remarks: A vessel of this type was apprehended last summer within the 12-mile limit and the trial held in Victoria.



VESSEL TYPE: Side Trawler (SRTM) VESSEL CLASS: Mayak

Lenght overall: 179 feet
Beam: 30 feet
Disp. tonnage (loaded-light): 930-918

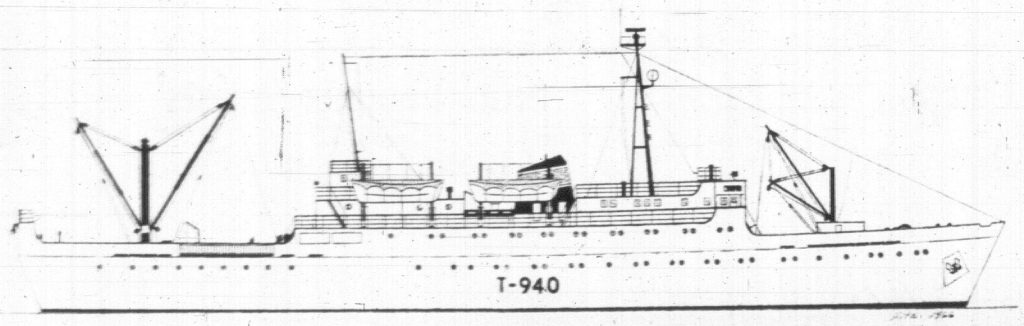
No. in crew: 30
Where built: U.S.S.R.
When built: 1962 — still building
No. built: unknown
Endurance: 33 days
Hold capacity: 12,537 pounds
Fuel capacity: unknown

Type of fishing gear: This vessel trawls with an 82-foot trawl and is conducted from the starboard side only. The drift nets or gill nets used vary in length and number.

Production capacity: The vessel can freeze about 6 tons of fish products per day and distill 3 tons of fresh water per day. The ship can hold frozen fish at minus 18 degrees and salted herring at 34 degrees.



Minis Disliked

BLANTYRE (AP) — President Hastings K. Banda, whose government has banned miniskirts from Malawi, said of a recent visit to London: "What I saw of London's youth, I wished I had not seen. The young question everything and girls do not wear decent dresses any more."

VESSEL TYPE: Stern Trawler (BMRT) VESSEL CLASS: Mayakovskiy

Legth overall: 278 feet
Beam: 46 feet
Disp. tonnage: (loaded-light) 3,712 - 3,658

Horsepower: 2,000
Number of screws: 1 (CP)
Fresh water capacity: unknown
Speed: 13.7 knots
Number in crew: 102-114
Where built: U.S.S.R.
When built: 1958—still building
Number built: 100 (at end of 1966)
Endurance: 80 days
Hold capacity: 58,658 pounds
Fuel capacity: unknown

Type of fishing gear: The vessel trawls with a 124-foot trawl.

Production capacity: The annual production capacity of a top vessel is 15,000 tons. The hold capacity of fish products is about 900 tons and the frozen products are stored at minus four degrees. The maximum daily capacity of frozen products is 20 tons of fillets and 10 tons of dressed fished which are frozen at minus 10 degrees. The meal plant can handle 20 tons of waste per day, the oil plant can use 1.6 tons of livers per day, and the canning plant has the capacity to process 3,500 tins of liver a day. Approximately 14 tons of distilled water can be produced per day.

Remarks: These vessels are often used in exploratory fishing operations.

U.S. MAY SHIP GAS TO GUAM

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The defence department has tentatively decided to transfer 3,000 tons of nerve gas and chemical weapons from Okinawa to the mid-Pacific Island of Guam, Pentagon sources said Tuesday.

Earlier plans to dispose of the mustard and nerve gases in Alaska and Oregon were called off by President Nixon after strong public protests.

Informed sources said an army inspection team selected Guam as a third choice and an official announcement was expected soon, possibly this week.

They said it was uncertain when the move would take place but said it might begin at the end of the summer.

Pressure to remove the poison gas began July when 24 Americans were overcome by fumes leaking from a faulty container.

ALL THE ANSWERS

Having Faith In Nanoseconds

By Jack Scott

We have today several soothing words about what computers are doing with your life. First, let me assure you that your guide (me) is fairly bursting with fear and loathing of any piece of hardware that answers back.

Scott

I always feel like one of the passengers, as the old story goes, in the first totally automatic airliner. "This is your computer speaking," the voice comes from the flight deck. "We are flying today without a crew. Our flight is programmed for 38,000 feet at 680 miles per hour. The modern scientific miracle of the computer has made this possible with only you passengers aboard. Do not be alarmed, nothing can go wrong, can go wrong, can go wrong. . . ."

Two things, occuring all but simultaneously, sent me hippity-hopping to City Hall.

One: in the morning my wife had gone to the B.C. Telephone office to inquire about the charges on several long-distance calls not of our making.

"The computer made an error," said the little lady at the desk, cheerfully refunding the money.

Two: In the afternoon a scientist from Washington appeared on the tube describing experiments to computerize the American war in Vietnam through the use of sensors which would relay information on enemy movements and instantly retaliate. "War will thus be brought to total sophistication," the scientist said.

★ ★ ★

Armegeddon by instant computation by a transistorized monster that apparently can get all balled-up over some simple phone calls, had me feeling suddenly like a sparrow caught in a badminton game.

Frank Grealy was, as I say, soothing. A bushy-haired, calm man of 38 who has worked with computers for six years, which puts him in the covered wagon set of his profession, he's in charge of the city's data processing.

A huge window in his office looks inward on a gleaming IBM machine called the 360 Model 20. As we talked it was out there, moaning softly, analyzing crime statistics, compiling your property assessments and taxation, gliding through accounts payable, costing vehicle expenses and God knows what. Had it been plotting the overthrow of the western world it wouldn't have surprised me.

"First of all," said Grealy, oozing reassurance, "computers seldom, if ever, make mistakes. It's easy to pass the buck to them, but in our two years with the 360 I've yet to see it goof. It's only human error that causes it to go wrong. In the business we say 'garbage in, garbage out.' Why, computers even have the human capacity of shutting up if they're confused. We've tried to confound this one with impossible demands. It just sensibly clams up.

"As for its capacity for evil, as a weapon of war, for example, you come back to the same story. Man still controls his own destiny. The computer is just one of the tools he uses. Not a very reliable tool, either, in the case of war, because you can kill a computer cold stone dead just by pulling the plug. John Edward Pfeiffer, who looked into this, pointed out that you'd need to mobilize tens of thousands of computers for battle conditions, that they'd be prime targets and, more important, if just one was destroyed the result could be a chaotic informational traffic jam.

"But, you see, when you've worked with computers, when you accept that the human evolution is the evolution of machines, you tend to think only of the immense good they can do.

"Man won't lose his questioning nature. He'll just find the answers quicker. This computer's work, you see, is measured in nanoseconds. That's a billionth of a second! There are as many nanoseconds in one second as there are seconds in 30 years!

"What that means, in real terms, is that a scientist may accomplish in one day what would take a hundred years without the machine. When you think of what that's done and will do, how it will design better cities for the future, offer new dimensioons in education and medicine, bring the day when you can simply dial a central computer to find instant answers, then you just have to have faith."

Steadied by these encouraging words I rose to leave, then recalled the question I'd meant to ask about computers selecting ideal mates for matrimony.

"Would you want your daughter to marry a computer's choice?" I blurted.

Frank Geary pondered the question, looking not nearly as confident as he'd seemed. The 360 Model 20 moaned away. The nanoseconds were ominously ticking past.

"That," he said, taking me right back to square one, "I wouldn't recommend."

INDIAN CAUGHT IN VICIOUS CIRCLE

Get Off, Then We'll Get Up—Chief Paul

By GINNY GALT

Over the last century, Canada's larger society has beaten the Indian people to their knees, and now has the audacity to ask "why don't you get up?", Chief Phillip Paul said Tuesday.

Paul, chief of the Tsartlip tribe told the Kiwanis Club that Indian people have to muster their own courage and surmount difficulties.

●

"Things won't be handed to them on a silver platter. But at the same time there should be a better appreciation of the Indian people by the larger society," said Paul.

He said Indians are fighting against stereotype images. They're the last to be hired and the first to be fired. Individual attitudes have got to change.

"If the larger society won't treat the Indian people as equals, it will have to pay the welfare tab."

He said Indian people are trapped in a vicious circle of environment, the educational system, unemployment, and bureaucratic goings-on in the federal governments Indian Affairs branch which they don't understand.

"Indian children are educated away from their people. They're not afforded the opportunity to identify and accept themselves for what they are."

He said there's also the conflict in cultures. They are taught the material values of the larger society which are completely different from their own cultural values.

●

Paul works for the school board's adult education branch as a co-ordinator for the Indian program which he says is biased towards Indian culture and history.

He said that quite arbitrarily past governments had set up legislation based on paternalism which has usurped all dignity the Indian people had.

Paul, who is on the executive on the union of B.C. Indian Chiefs and B.C. representative to the National Indian Brotherhood, said he partook in the so-called advice and consultation sessions to determine a federal Indian policy.

"What really happened was the Indian people expressed areas of need and concern. The government gathered it all together, put it aside, and superimposed its own policy.

"The federal government says it would like to end its responsibility to the Indian people and pass it on to the provincial governments."

The provincial governments are not equipped to deal with this responsibility effectively, he said.

"The federal government pulled a very good political move with their legislation. They used the same terms and phrases used by the Indian people, but used their own ideas in how they felt the Indians should be directed."

●

Paul said the final meeting of Indians from all across Canada to discuss changes in the Indian Act was useless because the government's legislation had already been written.

FLUSHING FLASH from his cage to freedom was no trick Tuesday. As soon as George Moore and Mark Perry lifted the door he was off — heading for Race Rocks and new friends. Times reporter Pat Dufour is in the co-pilot's seat, watching Flash prepare for take-off.

Flash Is Banished to Sea Forever And He Couldn't Be More Grateful

By PAT DUFOUR

When a sea lion becomes rambunctious you don't send him to Coventry — you send him to the colony — and his heart's desire.

This happened Tuesday to Flash, the dominating 200-pound California sea lion at Sealand in Oak Bay — and he took his punishment with the same relish a tar downs his tot.

Flash, somewhere between three and four years old, had become a bit of a problem child.

★ ★ ★

It started when a male competitor, Cavendish, tried to stir a case of hero-worship with Ralph, the youngest sea lion in the pond. Cavendish resented Flash's interest in Ralph and bullied him mercilessly.

Eventually Cavendish was sold to the Vancouver aquarium and Flash was able to bask in the glow of Ralph's adoration.

Then Sealand president Bob Wright bought three smaller sea lions and the fun began all over again.

★ ★ ★

This time it was Flash who adopted the bullying tactics.

So Tuesday Wright decided that Flash had to go. His destination — the colony of Steller and California sea lions which make heir headquarters at Race Rocks.

We set out from Pedder Bay in two runabouts. George Moore was at the wheel of ours. At the stern flopped Flash, nosing at the cage that kept him from slithering over the side.

He seemed to know his punishment was just what he would have ordered.

He snorted, pricked up his whiskers while we headed out into seas made lumpy by strong westerlies.

At the Race the winds whipped the ocean into a meringue froth . . . no place for a runabout.

So we headed into the bay off George Point on Bentinck Island. Seconds later the door of the cage was lifted and Flash plopped into the water without even taking a breath.

He dove, he swam, and circled the boats as if in a gratefual farewell.

It wasn't long before he headed toward the Race as if operating on radar.

Trainer Mark Perry said, almost regretfully:

"He never hesitated a second, one second in the boat, the next, away."

Wright, too, had some regrets.

"I only hope that he'll be able to make out with the killer whales."

★ ★ ★

Then, as if to reassure himself he related a story told him by some northern fishermen.

Sea lions are the natural prey of killer whales and it has been known for them to scramble onto a beach, right next to a man, to avoid their hunters.

Job Famine Drives Youth To the Road

The number of young travellers who stayed at Cool-Aid's house last month is nearly double the number in May a year ago.

Cool-Aid staff worker Laurie Smith said the organization provided meals and beds for 386 young people in May 1970 compared to 206 cases for May 1969.

"Young people are really on the road this year. There's no work, no jobs, nothing for them to do," he said.

Other staff workers said they expect the demand to become greater as the summer wears on. In August 1969, 683 persons stopped in at Cool-Aid for a few days' rest and lodging. And the staff estimates they may have to house more than 1,000 during August this year.

To help meet the increased demand, Cool-Aid borrowed from the Department of National Defence 40 bunk beds, and mattresses, 80 blankets and 50 pillows.

The group has set these up in the basement of St. John's Church hall. St. John's donated the use of its hall basement for six months and gave Cool-Aid a $1,000 grant to help operate the extended facility.

24 HOURS DAILY

Charles Barber, Cool-Aid organizer, said the group also has 26 families in Victoria who have offered to billet young people who need a place to stay.

"We pride ourselves on being able to provide emergency service 24 hours a day," he said.

Smith said the Victoria police and welfare departments often refer young people to the house at 953 Balmoral. Others, he said, hear about Cool-Aid through the grapevine before they arrive in Victoria.

"In the winter you get the hard-core kids. In the summer kids are just bopping around," he said.

Salmonella Victims Recovering

The three people still in hospital following a salmonella outbreak 11 days ago are reported in good condition today.

Staff of the Greater Victoria metropolitan board of health and hospital laboratory technicians continue their efforts to pinpoint the source of the infection.

About 60 people were hit hard by the salmonella organism following a school reunion at The Empress June 13. They suffered severe cramps, headaches and diarrhea.

Four of the victims have been admitted to hospital since, two men and two women. One of them was sent home Tuesday.

Two were admitted last Wednesday, one Friday and one Sunday.

A Car Is a Car Is a Car Even If It Lacks a Motor

By STEVE HUME

A car without an engine, transmission and running gear is still a motor vehicle, Judge William Ostler ruled in provincial court Tuesday.

Tod Warren Morton, 19, of 1125 Empress, appeared in court on charges of operating a motor vehicle with no insurance, no current plates, and driving while under suspension.

Court had been told that Morton was behind the wheel of a towed car which had no engine or running gear when the charges were laid.

The defence argued that the vehicle in question was not a motor vehicle in terms of legal definition, and argued further that Morton was not driving it.

The prosecution countered that the vehicle was a car, and that Morton was still able to steer and control it and was therefore a driver.

Ostler said, after hearing arugment, that "clearly the device was a vehicle, and the vehicle as defined by the Motor Vehicles Act was designed to be self-propelled."

He said the vehicle was being used as a conveyance by Morton, and pointed out that although the engine had been removed, it had been removed for overhaul and was to be replaced.

Ostler ruled that Morton was a driver because he was operating the steering and towing mechanism of the vehicle.

"I consider this a test case. I have no desire whatever to punish this young man. I think he acted under a genuine misapprehension," Ostler said in finding Morton guilty on the first charge.

Instead of the usual fine of $250, he sentenced Morton to six months probation on the charge of driving without insurance.

However, Ostler quashed the second charge dealing with operating a car without current licence plates.

Morton was remanded to July 3 for trial on the charge of driving while under suspension.

ST. JOSEPH'S GETS REPAIRS

St. Joseph's Hospital Tuesday was authorized by the provincial government to award a $24,200 contract for renovations to the pediatric department.

The project includes construction of a three-bed intensive care unit, a centralized chart area, modernized bathroom facilities and renovation of ward areas.

Health Minister Loffmark said the contract, to be awarded to Cana Construction Ltd., is subject to regional hospital board approval.

Arthur Mayse . . .

BY A PLESANT ROAD IN Gordon Head, there lives a housewife who deserves well of her community. Her children do her proud. Her husband, a good provider, is handier than most with lawnmower and leaf rake. They keep the peace, and get along with their neighbors.

But one evening last week, this patient, slow-to-anger lady blew her top with a bang that may still be echoing around Saanich Municipal Hall.

Her name doesn't matter. What does is her reaffirmation of a truth too often neglected or ignored. This is that the citizen with a righteous cause, a redhot gripe and the determination to make a point stick, may achieve such results as you would scarce believe.

Like Moses of old, she struck the rock and caused water to gush forth. For that, she should be remembered with a small, fierce statue, or maybe a perpetually-bubbling fountain.

For years, a situation developed on the uphill side of her suburban road when summer brought warm weather, and sprinkling restrictions were yet to be announced.

In the late afternoon, water pressure would begin to drop. Taps that had yielded a reasonable flow earlier gave forth only a grudging trickle.

Another hour, and those taps were completely dry. The home-owners affected knew their drought would continue until late evening.

The dishes couldn't be washed. Nobody could have a bath, or even a drink of water. Naturally, everybody immediately became thirsty. So someone would take a pail, pioneer style, and a neighbor on the down-slope side of the road would fill it from his own diminished supply.

The taxpayers concerned are a tolerant bunch, not inclined to fuss or fume. They made do as best they could through each seasonal dry spell, exchanging grumbles on occasion, and hoping that a pump in the right location would eventually solve their problem.

Then came the evening when the housewife of my account arrived home with her family from an afternoon outing. She was hot, she was tired. She had dinner to cook, dishes to wash, and baths to run.

She turned a tap, and got not so much as a drip.

"That was too much," she tells me. "I decided something had to be done."

She phoned Saanich public works, using the after-five number, and explained her predicament. A polite voice at the other end replied that public works was waiting for a pump to be delivered.

It was then that the lady blew her top.

"Listen," she said, "we've been hearing about that pump for the past five years. I need water now!"

Without luck, she tried to get in touch with Saanich Mayor Curtis (out of town) Acting Mayor Passmore, and several aldermen.

By way of variety, she also called Saanich police. The officer to whom she stated her case was sympathetic and a good listener. But her problem wasn't one he could help with.

But this time it was 8:30 p.m., and her telephone ear was slightly numb. But she dialed Saanich fire department.

Once more, she explained her problem. Then she demanded that the department open the hydrant kitty-corner from her home.

"Madam," said the fireman, "there is no water in that hydrant. Not a drop."

In the event of a fire, he explained Saanich would dispatch a pump-equipped standby rig with 4,000 gallons in its tank. While it coped, a pumper truck would hopefully seek for a hydrant that did have water in it.

Sometime after 9 p.m.—herself still phoning and still being told, "Sorry, there's nothing we can do" — she knocked off for the night.

By that time, her house taps were good for a piddling little stream.

Next morning, she settled grimly by her phone. She heard a good deal about the Big Pump in the Sky, but refused to be turned from her purpose.

"Finally I got through to Municipal Engineer Neville Life," she says. "He began to give me facts and figures. I told him, 'Your job is to get water to these houses somehow.'"

Before the morning was out, a couple of municipal trucks put into her home road. Pressures were checked; the water wizards got to work. The municipality was going to get water in somehow.

"That evening," the housewife ends her account, "we had almost more water pressure than we could handle."

Sprinkling restrictions have eased the general problem. And some day, the pump will come. But the lady's final question strikes me as valid.

The job of switching a few houses to a more adequate source of water supply was done in a day. Why did those householders have to wait years for it?

SECOND ASPHALT coat goes down on long-awaited Esquimalt senior secondary 400-metre track. Blacktop will be allowed to cure a few days before application of final rubberized coat. Completion of the track is realization of Esquimalt students Project 70 fund drive. Cost of the track facilities, expected to total around $40,000, are being shared by school, municipality and school board. Completion of pit areas is expected next spring. Meanwhile neighbours, police and a commissionaire are keeping a watch on the delicate surface to keep youngsters on bicycles off.

Man Claims Police Bribed

SEATTLE (AP) — Payoffs to state liquor inspectors, beat officers and the vice squad were required to operate a Seattle tavern and card room, a witness said in U.S. District Court here Tuesday.

Elmer Nelson of Camano Island, was the first witness in the perjury trial of M. E. Cook, retired assistant police chief.

Cook is accused of perjuring himself during a federal grand jury hearing when he denied knowing of police participations in shakedowns or payoffs.

Nelson said that from 1962 to 1965, he had to pay the state liquor inspector $10 a month and the police officer on the beat $20 a month, and when he added a card room to his tavern he was told he must pay $100 a month to the vice squad and $100 to each of two shifts of beat police.

Visitor to Modern London Can Tread Steps of Dickens

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — Charles Dickens's London lives on, and this summer more pilgrims than ever will be treading in the fictional footsteps of Mr. Pickwick, Mr. Micawber, Bill Sikes and those others of the unforgettable gallery of Dickens characters.

Despite the wear and tear of age and wartime bombing, London retains more landmarks—personal and literary—of Dickens than there are George-Washington-slept here places in the United States.

This year—the 100th anniversary of the death of Dickens — the government and lovers of the long-whiskered author are piling on ceremonies that will include everything from exhibits at the British Museum and readings from his works to a service attended by members of the Royal Family at his grave in Westminster Abbey's Poet's Corner.

But for the real fans of Dickens, who is about neck-and-neck with Shakespeare as the most popular writer in all history, the kick will be in going around tramping over the places he marked indelibly either by his own living or by putting his people into them.

STILL IDENTIFIABLE

In many places, they will be looking at different sights from those of Dickens's Victorian times. But in general the neighborhoods are identifiable.

For instance, the Bull Inn at Holborn which Mrs. Sairey Gamp and Betsey Prig (Martin Chuzzlewit) frequented now has been overgrown by the huge department store of Gamages.

The Barbican district where characters in Barnaby Rudge, Little Dorrit and Oliver Twist appeared now is the site of a multi-million-pound high-rise office and apartment development.

On the other hand, the Borough Market is still in business south of the Thames and it was of this that Dickens wrote about such things as Alfred Jingle (Pickwick Papers) dropping by while Sam Weller was polishing the boots of a farmer refreshing himself with "a slight lunch of two or three pounds of cold beef and a pot or two of porter."

The Bow Street police court, where the Artful Dodger and Oliver Twist were tried, is still there and looking as Dickensian as ever though now on the opposite side of the street from Covent Garden where the evil Sikes used to find criminal recruits.

BRANDY AND WATER

Down Cheapside near the City financial district the aficionados will be able to stroll over about the same ground where the portly Mr. Pickwick and Sam Weller, his man-of-all-work, walked gloomily and had a glass of brandy and water after calling on the shysters Dodson and Fogg when Mr. Pickwick was being sued for breach of promise.

The pilgrims will hunt in vain for Dickens's original Old Curiosity Shop. There are a couple of places in London carrying the name but it is generally agreed that the shop was on a spot close to Trafalgar Square now partly occupied by a statue of actor Henry Irving.

Well, there are always such things as the George Yard in the financial district's Lombard Street where Mr. Pickwick and Sam took up quarters at the George and Vulture after leaving the home of Mrs. Bardell, who sued him.

It was here that Mr. Pickwick got his breach-of-promise subpoena for the later famous trial at the Guildhall. The Guildhall Court is still there, though rebuilt from the days of such Dickensian advocates as Serjeant Snubbins.

'CARVER AND CUTTER'

Famous Guy's Hospital will have to be on the itinerary. It was there that bibulous Bob Sawyer (Pickwick Papers)—called by Mrs. Raddle "a carver and cutter of people's bodies"—got his experience.

At Kingsgate Street above Holborn the School of Arts and Crafts now covers the site where Mrs. Gamp lived over Poll Sweedepipe's shaving establishment and had a notable tea party with Mrs. Prig.

Nor is anything left of the Marshalsea prison south of the Thames where Little Dorrit was born and where, in real life, Dickens' father was jailed for debt. Mr. Micawber (David Copperfield) also did a stretch there after something failed to "turn up."

And Mincing Lane near the north side of London Bridge, where Bella Wilfer (Our Mutual Friend) called at the offices of Chicksey, Veneering and Stobbles to see her father amid the odor of the herb market smelling like a drug-store drawer, has been rebuilt after bombing. Even the fascinating smell has gone.

LONDON BRIDGE MOVES

London Bridge itself, where Jonas Chuzzlewit after the murder threw a bundle of clothes over the side, has moved on. The bridge of Dickens's day is being replaced and transported stone by stone to be rebuilt in Arizona as a promotion gimmick there.

Newgate prison, too, has vanished but its site may be seen near the Old Bailey court. It was in Newgate that the notorious Fagin (Oliver Twist) was imprisoned and died. At Old Bailey—pretty much unchanged—Darnay (A Tale of Two Cities) was acquitted of treason.

Bombing has accounted for the disappearance of Thavies Inn (Bleak House). This was Mrs. Jellyby's place where "one of the young Jellyby's been and got his head through the area railings."

There are still a few hundred of these that could be listed and besides there are all the places that the author himself inhabited, worked in or visited. In all, there is enough of them to keep the fan tramping around for weeks at the shrines.

Resignation Eases Irish Pressure

DUBLIN (AP) — Political pressure against Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch eased with the resignation Monday night of former government minister Kevin Boland from the ruling Fianna Fail party.

Boland quit as minister of local government in Lynch's cabinet last month to protest charges of arms smuggling made against two other ministers. Three weeks ago the Fianna Fail voted to expel him for remarks he made against Lynch.

Boland was joint secretary of the party, which holds a majority of only six in the Irish parliament. His continued membership could have split the party and exposed Lynch's government to defeat.

Bill WALKER

The weekend in review, or as Tony Jacklin, winner of the U.S. Open, said before he had won the event: "As a professional golfer you have to accept conditions no matter what they are. There is no use grumbling."

And young Mr. Jacklin won, as they also say in the trade, "going away at the finish." The only golfer to break par in the wind on opening day, he did it three other times as well. There was nobody else close.

Which is what another eager youngster did at Pitt Meadows on Saturday. Young Carl Schwantje of the Victoria Club wrapped up his measure of greatness just as neatly and proudly by winning the B.C. Amateur Golf Championship.

And he did it by defeating two pretty fair golfers, Bert Ticehurst and Johnny Russell. These were veteran Willingdon Cup players who shouldn't wilt under pressure and aren't ever likely to be giving away any favors to a youngster.

But it was Schwantje in his finest week, who told them both off in the crucial match play tests. Ticehurst probably gave Carl the one break he needed. Because Bert did become unstuck after establishing a four-hole lead after 10 holes. He shouldn't have lost the next six holes, but he did, and then it was Schwantje, the youngster, who was showing the nerves of steel.

The next day the test was Russell, and if there had been a growing suspicion that this one surely would separate the man from the boy, the experts were in for a shocker.

Schwantje had learned his previous day's lesson well. And by the end of the first nine, thanks to a three-under par by Schwantje, Russell was looking at a four-hole deficit. This grew to six holes by the luncheon interval. By the 27th hole in the afternoon there was no change.

The kid had suddenly come of age. B.C. had a new golf champ.

Which is good. Because now Victoria is back in the picture. Vancouver won't be hogging all those Willingdon Cup berths again. And if there is the disturbing thought that perhaps someone will point to Schwantje's third-place finish in the Victoria Amateur and say what happened there? Then so what!

Because Carl can point to the scores of three fellows in the U.S. Open and answer likewise. Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player didn't win. They never even figured. Palmer was 24 strokes off the pace, Nicklaus 23, and Player 21.

There had been another criticism of Schwantje earlier, from an observer who shall be nameless, but who has the interests of the game, if not Schwantje, at heart.

He thought that perhaps any troubles that Carl may have had previously may have come from his tendency to start slugging the ball at times, expecially when he was being outdriven off the tee. Which is understandable if you have pride in your work.

But now, after Saturday's victory it would appear that he has put his game all together for the good of B.C., for Victoria, and for himself. His aim is a golf scholarship. Suddenly his marks are much better now than they were just one week ago.

It was refreshing, too, that Jacklin was such a gracious winner of the U.S. Open. He had told it like it was on opening day, with a fine sub par round into a gale, and then he never looked back. And perhaps he, too, has a story to tell.

When he got his first invite to the U.S. in the Masters, it was more or less by default. He was No. 5 on a list where only four were welcome. But one player didn't like to fly, so Jacklin took his place.

He finished 16th in that Masters, but more to the point, he realized that he had many shortcomings if he was ever going to make it as a champion.

He didn't know as much as he once thought he did' So he went back to school, the PGA school in the United States. Then he went on tour. Both events took place in 1967.

History quickly took over. He became almost financially independent when he won the British Open last year.

Sunday school was out again.

He had earned his diploma. He also had a cheque for $30,000 and a promise of endorsements that could total a million dollars.

School had been good to him.

Which is what Schwantje wants, too.

The chance to learn even more.

TOUCH OF THE OLD METS

Although they won baseball's World Series last year, New York Mets occasionally display touches of their zanier, unhappier seasons. Playing the Cubs in National League game at Chicago Tuesday, two Mets, shortstop Bud Harrelson (left) and second-baseman Ken Boswell crashed together while chasing fly ball. Harrelson managed to make catch and Mets went on for 12-10 victory in 10 innings. (AP Wirephoto.)

Slump-Stopping Lefty May Have Found Home

Brunet Pitches Senator Victory Against Tigers

By The Associated Press

George Brunet, who has pitched baseball in 15 minor league cities and with eight major league clubs, appears to have finally found a home with Washington Senators as the man who stops the slump.

Brunet, 36, scattered six hits over seven innings Tuesday night to lead the Senators in a 6-2 triumph over Detroit Tigers that ended Washington's losing streak at five games.

The left-hander also pitched Washington to its only other victory in nine games, a 3-1 win over Minnesota Twins last Monday.

In other American League games Tuesday, Milwaukee Brewers edged Minnesota 4-3, Boston Red Sox whipped Baltimore Orioles 6-1, Kansas City Royals beat Oakland Athletics 7-5 and Chicago White Sox downed California Angels 7-3.

Brunet made his professional debut in 1953 at Shelby, N.C., and has since been to such spots as Seminole, Okla., Crowley, La., and Hawaii.

He finally made it to stay in the majors in 1964 with Los Angeles Angels and was voted their all-time left-hander by Angel fans.

HAS HOMER HELP

Tuesday night, Brunet, got help from Tim Cullen, Paul Casanova and Wayne Comer. Cullen hit a homer, Casanova had a two-run shot and Comer drilled a two-run double in the Senator's seventh inning that finished Tigers starter Mickey Lolich. Mike Epstein also unloaded a home run for the Senators.

Lolich, Detroit's ace left-hander, hasn't won since May 28 and his record now is 6-8. His single drove in both Detroit runs off Brunet in the fourth.

Pinch hitter Gus Gil cracked a two-out, two-run double in the ninth inning, giving the Brewers their narrow triumph over Minnesota.

Gil slammed his game-winning hit off reliever Ron Perranoski, who had just entered the game. Phil Roof connected for a bases-empty homer for the Brewers while George Mitterwald had a two-run shot for the Twins.

ORIOLES SHACKLED

Ray Culp fired a three-hitter and the Red Sox smashed 12 hits, including home runs by Tony Conigliaro and Rico Petrocelli to snap the Orioles' winning streak at five games.

Conigliaro's two-run homer, his 14th of the season, started a three-run Boston fifth against loser Jim Palmer, 10-4, making it easy for Culp, 6-7, who struck out eight.

Bill Melton slugged a three-run homer and Syd O'Brien added a bases-clearing double, giving rookie right-hander Jerry Janeski his seventh triumph of the season in Chicago's triumph over the Angels.

EXPOS NIP PHILS

Montreal Expos were on their way to another of their classic ninth-inning crashes Tuesday night when reliever Claude Raymond came on to stop a Philadelphia Phillies threat and ease the Expos to a 2-1 victory.

The Expos scored in the first and fifth innings and took the 2-0 lead into the ninth. Then Rick Joseph and Jim Hutton of Philadelphia singled.

Raymond relieved Dan McGinn after a sacrifice by Oscar Gamble and immediately gave up an infield hit to Ron Stone who drove Joseph home.

Raymond then got Danny Doyle out on a short fly, intentionally walked Tony Taylor and struck out Larry Bowa to halt the Phillies.

Elsewhere in the National League, Bill Singer pitched hitless ball for 7 2-3 innings to lead Los Angeles Dodgers in a 7-0 romp over Atlanta Braves, New York Mets edged Chicago Cubs 12-10, Pittsburgh Pirates downed St. Louis Cardinals 7-2, Cincinnati Reds trimmed San Francisco Giants 5-3 and Houston Astros defeated San Diego Padres 2-1.

BUNNING IS VICTIM

The Expos got their first run off loser Jim Bunning when Mack Jones singled and took second on an error. He got home on a sacrifice and a fly by Rusty Staub.

McGinn, who gave up six hits, connected for a single in the fifth and scored on a double by Marv Staehle.

Clete Boyer broke up Singer's no-hit bid at Atlanta with a two-out single in the eighth and the weary Dodger right-hander was immediately lifted. Pete Mikkelsen finished, allowing the Braves' other hit in the ninth.

The Dodgers broke their game open with a six-run fifth inning, the first run scoring on a bases-loaded walk to Singer.

Glove on Step Helped Expos

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A glove on the top step of the dugout helped Montreal Expos beat Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 Tuesday night.

It happened in the first inning when Expos' Mack Jones slashed a ground ball toward right field. Phillies' first baseman Deron Johnson made a fine stop, but his off-balance throw rolled toward the Montreal dugout.

Jones, who was credited with a single, stopped at first as catcher Mike Compton recovered the ball. Before the next batter moved in, however, Montreal manager Gene Mauch hustled out of the dugout and engaged the umpires in a discussion on the play.

After talking with Mauch, the homeplate umpire Al Barlick motioned Jones to second base. Now, Phillies' manager Frank Lucchesi charged out, but he lost his debate with Barlick.

Marve Staehle then sacrificed Jones to third from where he scored on a sacrifice fly by Rusty Staub.

Mauch later explained:

"My players told me the ball hit a glove on the top step of the dugout. If the ball struck the step it would still be in play, but when it hits a piece of equipment, that's considered in the dugout."

The ground rules at Connie Mack Stadium give the runner the base if a thrown ball goes into the dugout.

"If there is any ballpark in the world I have a chance to know the ground rules, this is it," said Mauch, who managed the Phillies nine years.

Adanacs Nip Burrards; Rocks Tackle Leaders

Coquitlam Adanacs are making things tougher for Victoria Shamrocks.

Going into a game last Saturday, the Adanacs were trailing the Shamrocks by four points in a struggle for third place in the four-team Western Lacrosse Association.

Today they are all square with the Irish after a surge that has suddenly tossed big chunks of pressure back on the Victorians for their battle at Memorial Arena tonight with the front-running New Westminster Salmonbellies.

It started Saturday for the Adanacs, who had seemed to be slipping out of the race for the league third and last playoff berth.

Coach Bobby Marsh's Adanacs stopped their skid by drubbing the high-playing Salmonbellies 17-9 and Tuesday night at Vancouver they proved their determination to earn a high rating as they nipped the second-place Burrards 10-9 in overtime.

That moved them back into a third-place deadlock with the Shamrocks, who get a chance to regain sole possession of that berth when they tangle with Salmonbellies in tonight's struggle.

ALLEN SETS PACE

John Allen was Coquitlam's Tuesday hero, scoring four goals, his last coming with two minutes and nine seconds left in the overtime period. The winners had to stage a great comeback as they trailed the Burrards, 7-4, going into the final period.

Also scoring for Coquitlam were Mike Gates and Bill Bradley with two goals each, Bob Parrent and Paul Scriver each with singles.

Scoring for Vancouver were Ron Flaten, Ross McDonald, Al Tasker and Gord Frederickson, each with two goals, and Richie Bourne with one.

Game time tonight is 8 p.m.

Bob Duden Leads Tacoma Tourney

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Defending champion Bob Duden of Portland shot a 67 Tuesday for a 134 total and a four-stroke lead in the 43rd annual Washington State Open golf tournament. Steve Ryan, a 23-year-old Seattle amateur was in second place with 138.

Doug Reid of Vancouver was grouped with seven others at 141 after firing a three-under-par 68.

ONTARIO CRICKETERS PLAY HERE THURSDAY

Toronto's Upper Canada College touring side will play two exhibition cricket games against select Victoria teams Thursday and Friday.

With an average age of 17, Upper Canada will be pitted against the Victoria area's best.

Selected to play for Victoria are captain Chris Rowe, Alec Porter, Mike Morgan and John Buchanan from the Albions, David Hall and Anthony Brierly from Cowichan, John Courtney and Andy Birch from Oak Bay, Jack Penfold from the Incogs, Mel Reeves and David McPhea from University School, and the twelfth man, Richard Wilson, from Glen Lyon school.

Thursday's game is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. at Beacon Hill Park. Friday's will be played at Shawnigan Lake School.

Molsons Tighten Battle for Lead

The battle for first place continues to rage in the Victoria Major Men's Softball League.

Second-place Molsons made it tighter Tuesday, defeating Denford Electric 4-1 at Central Park to move within one game of league-leading Bate Construction.

Molsons scored all their runs in the third inning as centerfielder Bob Lowe led off with a double, and scored when Art Jones sacrificed. Dave Lowe crossed the plate on Dan Lawson's groundout, and Jim John slammed out a two-run double to complete the rally.

Denford managed only six hits, one of them a home run by Brian Grexton, off winning pitcher Mike Rye who struck out a total of 10 batters.

VETERAN MILERS MATCH . . . . . . STRATEGY ON SUNDAY

Ancient Running Feud Revived

A running feud that has been smouldering for two decades will be re-kindled Sunday at the Y-Times international track and field meet at Centennial Stadium.

Veteran middle-distance runners Don Burgess and Gerry Swan will lay their reputations on the line, perhaps for the last time, when they clash in the joggers' mile.

Burgess and Swan, both top milers in the Pacific Northwest Conference 20 years ago, will meet again in the special event that emphasizes strategy over leg-power.

Both runners had plenty of leg-power in the old days, but their memories differ as to who had the most.

Burgess, still a well-known rugby player in Victoria, claims he won most of the races with Swan. But Swan claims he had the better times.

The joggers' mile is designed to give all runners a chance to test their tactical know-how as well as their legs.

Men must run to a standard of 7:30, a far cry from the four-minute mile everybody sought in the early 50's.

What makes the standard difficult is that as in carrallying, the competitors must strive to cross the finish line right on that time.

It is a severe test of pace that demands confidence and a backlog of running experience.

The track meet begins at 11 a.m. Sunday for open competition, following age-class events Friday and Saturday.

Lone Canadian Ousted In Wimbledon Tourney

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) — While Rod Laver of Australia and Arthur Ashe of the United States led a parade of favorites into the third round of men's tennis singles in the All-England tennis championships today, the only Canadian at Wimbledon met swift elimination as the women's competition opened Tuesday.

Freckle-faced Jane O'Hara of Toronto, making her singles debut here after playing in women's doubles in 1969, took a 6-4, 6-3 beating from Marianne Brummer of South Africa after opening up a 4-1 lead in the first set.

The 18-year-old Canadian junior closed champion lost her concentration and surrendered 10 straight games to her more experienced 21-year-old opponent before staging a mild comeback that was too little and too late.

Laver, the man to watch as he campaigns for his third straight title in the world's top tennis classic, whipped young Australian John Alexander 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 Tuesday to lead a contingent of five Aussie professionals through the second day of the tournament.

AUSSIES SWEEP SETS

John Newcombe, Tony Roche, Ken Rosewall and Roy Emerson, seeded second, fourth, fifth and 10th respectively, all had straight set victories in the second round.

Ashe, from Richmond, Va., led four other United States players into today's third round by overcoming Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia 9-7, 11-3, 6-4, 6-3 in a two-hour marathon which featured Ashe's powerful backhand. Ashe is the No. 3 seed.

Other Americans advancing were Stan Smith, Clark Graebner and Dennis Ralston, seeded seventh, ninth and 15th respectively, and unseeded Marty Riessen.

Two of the All-England tournament seeds dropped to the sidelines in Tuesday's grey, gusty conditions.

OKKER OUSTED

Eleventh-seeded Tom Okker of The Netherlands lost 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 to Bob Hewitt of South Africa, fired up at being left out of the seedings, while 13th-seeded Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia was stopped by Alexander Metreveli of the Soviet Union 6-2, 7-5, 3-6, 2-6, 7-5.

In women's singles, top-ranked Margaret Court of Australia and second-seeded Billie King of the U.S. get into action today, although not against each other, after being idle through the opening round Tuesday.

Four seeded players advanced through the first round. Virginia Wade of Britain, Kerry Melville of Britain and Rosemary Casals and Julie Heldman, both of the United States, all had straight set wins. The four are seeded third to sixth respectively.

TONY KEEPS PROMISE AFTER GREAT WELCOME

LONDON (AP)—Tony Jacklin, winner of the U.S. Open golf championship, arrived back in London from the United States Tuesday and immediately drove north to Lincolnshire to keep a six-months-old promise.

Jacklin, 25-year-old truck-driver's son, said he had promised his old headmaster to present the prizes at school sports day and wasn't going to let them down.

"I am tired from lack of sleep, but I must keep my promise," he said.

Jacklin, accompanied by his 26-year-old wife Vivienne and their seven-month-old son, Bradley, received a tremendous welcome at London airport.

TROTTING TITLE RACE

MONTREAL (CP) — The one-mile Canadian trotting championship race, which will carry a purse value of $15,000, will be held July 15 at Richelieu Park.

Pitcher Belts Winning Blow

George Brice was an all-round winner Tuesday night as Gorge Hotel defeated Greaves Movers, 5-4, in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park.

The Gorge pitcher won his own game in the first extra inning, hitting a double that scored Bill James to crack a 4-4 stalemate that existed at the end of the seventh frame.

In turning in a fine performance, Brice struck out six Greaves batters, hit another double and single in four trips to the plate, and scored in the seventh when each team counted twice to force overtime action.

Victory moved Gorge to within one game of league-leading Transport Workers.

FRENCH YACHT AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The 12-metre France, the French contender for the America's Cup, has arrived at Newport along with two other yachts owned by the same syndicate.

The French will spend the summer preparing for the best-of-seven competition against the Australian yacht Gretell III in late August.

The winner of that series will take on the winner of the American trials for the America's Cup, beginning Sept. 15.

JUMPING MEET SITE

NEW DENMARK, N.B. (CP) — The 1971 North American ski jumping championships will be staged here next February by the Viking Ski Club.

Unbeaten Nijinsky Rules as Favorite

DUBLIN (CP) — Nijinsky, the American-owned superhorse which was bred at E. P. Taylor's Windfield Farms near Toronto, rules today as prohibitive odds-on favoritie at 7 to 2 to win the Irish Derby at the Curragh Saturday.

Nijinsky's dominance is expected to result in the smallest field since the race for three-year-olds first came under the sponsorship of the Irish hospitals sweepstakes eight years ago.

While 32 horses still are qualified, including two owned by Canadians, no more than a dozen may line up in search of the $143,155 first money.

Nijinsky, owned by Charles W. Engelhard of Far Hills, N.J., has won all of his eight starts, including two British classics this year — the Epsom Derby and the 2,000 Guineas.

The Canadian-owned entrants in the Curragh test are Taylor's Northern Monarch, trained in Ireland, and Party Mink, an Irish-bred colt owned by Malcolm D. Thorp of Sarnia, Ont.

O.C. CRICKET

LONDON (AP) — Close-of-play cricket scores Tuesday:

Somerset, 158 and 254 for 7, defeated Derbyshire, 198 and 211 for 7 declared, by three wickets.

Hampshire, 325 for 9 and 184 for 5, drew with Lancashire, 251 and 232 for 9.

Yorkshire, 203 and 181 for 7, beat Warwickshire, 120 and 263, by three wickets.

Northamptonshire, 288 for 9 and 44 for 1, beat Sussex, 244 and 85 for 8, by nine wickets.

Middlesex, 379 for 6 and 160 for 4, beat Gloucestershire, 296 for 5 and 140.

Glamorgan, 252 for 6, drew with Surrey, 259 for 9 and 72 for 3.

Rio Residents Are Recovering

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters) — Cariocas, the residents of Rio, were recovering today from an epic celebration marking the return of Brazil's World Cup soccer championships from Mexico City.

Rio staged a gigantic unprecedented welcome Tuesday night as the players returned with the Jules Rimet Trophy, symbol of world soccer supremacy. The Brazilians won it Sunday by beating Italy 4-1 in the World Cup final.

Hundreds of thousands of people turned out in downtown streets, waving flags and hurling firecrackers, as samba bands performed and ticker-tape drifted down from helicopters and buildings.

The players rode into Rio on three fire trucks after enthusiastic welcomers in cars and trucks created a five-mile traffic jam on the road from the airport.

It took about 7,500 police in Rio to control the crowds trying to embrace the players.

Tuesday was a national holiday in Brazil to mark the World Cup victory for soccer-mad Brazilians. It was also the third day of a carnival which began when the soccer final was played Sunday.

The death toll in Brazil from celebrations of the victory increased to more than 100 Tuesday, although it was impossible to determine how many died as a direct result of the wild jubilation.

Brazilians began celebrating even before the final game was played.

In the 48 hours starting at midnight Saturday, the Rio morgue registered 73 bodies. A pathologist on duty said the average is 20 a day. He added that it would be difficult to determine how many of the deaths were directly connected with the celebrations, but said that many were a result of vilence.

Canada's Anti-Pollution Drive Stalled

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States appears to be sticking to its own pace and plans for combatting Great Lakes pollution.

This became plain here Tuesday after a day-long conference of Canadian cabinet ministers and White House officers at which the chief point of announced agreement seemed to be to one of talking over plans and trying to keep them co-ordinated.

Canada made several commitments to take specific steps. There were no new reciprocal promises from the Americans.

Canada pledged:

● To co-ordinate a Canadian plan for dealing with spills of oil and hazardous substances with the plan announced a month ago by the Americans. The Canadian plan still is being drafted.

● To ban phosphates in laundry detergents in line with recommendations made to the International Joint Commission. The U.S. refused to make a similar commitment, noting that a ban is under "intensive review."

● To ban oil and gas production from Lake Erie wells and prohibit further drilling. No petroleum is produced on the American side of the lake. The Americans declined to commit themselves not to explore for or tap this resource in the future.

The two countries agreed that each will unify legislation for regulating waste disposal by commercial and pleasure vessels using the lakes.

But there was no specific mention of a Canadian initiative, voiced recently in a Buffalo speech by Energy Minister J. J. Greene, to hold the U.S. to the letter of the 1909 boundary waters treaty setting up the International Joint Commission.

Mr. Greene in his address at Buffalo noted that the treaty's terms call for action against the nation polluting boundary waters and said the U.S. creates most of the Great Lakes pollution.

Canada and the U.S. Tuesday did say they agree to establish a working committee to consider common water quality objectives and programs proposed by either government.

But they reached no agreement on co-ordination machinery for these programs.

Mr. Greene at first said co-ordination will be the job of the working group. But later, in a news conference, he amended this to say it would be done by contact of officials of the two governments.

Russell Train, who heads President Nixon's council on environment quality, said the machinery was not discussed but that Mr. Greene's idea sounded like a good one to him.

On a ban on phosphates in detergents, he said the U.S. is unconvinced that this is the best way to deal with the pollution problem.

The U.S. government was convinced, however, that phosphates are a major factor in the Great Lakes problem on which the International Joint Commission is to make recommendations to both governments this fall.

Mr. Train said that current programs in the U.S. would remove 80 per cent of all phosphates from municipal and industrial sewage, including detergents, by 1973. This would be two years ahead of the date recommended by the IJC.

As for the dangers from oil and gas drilling, subject of an IJC report last fall, the U.S. offered no promises.

Mr. Train said that was a matter for the state governments, not the U.S. federal government.

Canada's commitment to the conference to carry out the restrictions recommended in the IJC report was made by Ontario's Energy Minister George Kerr, who was part of the Canadian team at the closed meeting.

'STRONG COMMITMENT' NEEDED FOR U.N.

NEW YORK (CP) — Lester B. Pearson warns that the United Nations "will diminish and ultimately disappear" unless its members show a stronger sense of international commitment.

He said experience proves that any international organization eventually will become politically helpless if it is merely a platform to promote national policy.

CURTIS TO MEET HYDRO HEAD

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis will meet B. C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum July 6 to discuss Hydro's plans for the municipality.

Curtis, who has just returned from a mayors' conference in Halifax, said he will discuss a "number of matters" with Shrum. They will include the power authority's plans for a sub-station in the Douglas-Beckwith area and a service centre in the north Quadra district.

ENGLISH-BORN ASHFORD HOPING . . . . . FOR REGULAR NHL POSITION

Malcolm Has Made a Good Start

Two Years Pro Experience For 22-Year-Old Victorian

By DAN STINSON

"If I was the referee-in-chief and had to assign a referee to the seventh game of the Stanley Cup final, it would be John Ashley."

Malcolm Ashford, of course, is not the National Hockey League's referee-in-chief. But don't count him out. He has made a good start toward such a goal.

MALCOLM ASHFORD
. . . started at 13

Ashford, a Victoria resident since 1957, worked as a linesman in more than 30 NHL games during the past two seasons. Not the most impressive record of service, perhaps, but since he is only 22 years of age, Malcolm should have many whistle stops ahead of him in the hockey world.

Born in England, Ashford came here when he was 10 years of age and started refereeing three years later in pup and peewee leagues.

He recalls his "early days" as an official:

"At that time there weren't too many referees around Victoria, so I started when I was 13 and just worked my way up through minor hockey. It got to the point where I'd go down to the arena at 6 every Saturday morning and referee right through to noon."

Ashford was also active as a player, but at 18 he realized he would go nowhere beyond the junior level. He then put 100 per cent of his hockey time and effort into refereeing.

Ashford attended Vern Buffey's first referee's school in Haliburton, Ontario, three years ago and impressed instructors with his officiating ability.

"There were no openings at that time," he recalls, "so they sent me back to Victoria to get more experience working local games."

It wasn't long until the NHL contacted Ashford, however, and in the summer of 1968 he signed a contract with the league.

Classed as a trainee linesman, Malcolm started in 1968-69 hockey season as a travelling linesman, working games in Phoenix, Denver and San Diego in the Western League.

He was occasionally assigned to NHL games and remembers working the lines in his initial major league appearance:

"It was on December 4, 1968 in a game between Los Angeles and Pittsburgh in L.A."

"I was damned nervous. There's so much more pressur on an official in the National League than in the minors because the calibre of play is so much better.

"It turned out okay, though."

●

Since that first NHL game, Ashford has travelled about 175,000 miles in his capacity as a hockey official. He has worked with every referee in the NHL and makes no bones over whom he thinks is best:

"John Ashley is my pick as the best official. He gets a lot of respect from the players, he never has too much trouble in the games he works. Above all, he's calm and collected on the ice."

But Ashford doesn't go along with the theory of trying to pattern his style of refereeing after another official:

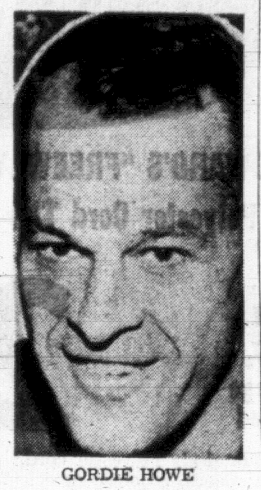
"There's no sense trying to copy anybody. You have to referee in your own style."

I asked him what he thought was the most difficult club in the NHL for a referee.

"Boston is always tough because, up until this year's playoff series, they were such a hard-hitting club. They like to play it rough, but really the players on Boston are just as clean as players on other clubs."

As a linesman, Ashford often sees more in a hockey game than the TV audience and even more than most of the fans at the arena. He sees a lot of the "dirty and sneaky" checks players dish out in the corners — things the majority of the fans miss.

"There are many young kids around today in pro hockey who, if they want to prove themselves, think they have to go around and hit the older, established pros."



GORDIE HOWE
. . . doesn't forget

"So a few of them, unwisely, decide to go after the best — Gordie Howe.

"Now Gordie is a type of hockey player who never goes looking for trouble. But if a player gives him a dirty check, Howe won't forget it.

"He won't turn around right away and retaliate, like most players will, but he'll wait — it might be the next period, the next game or even several games later. And when the circumstances are right, look out! Howe has sent more than one player head over heels!"

●

One of the many duties of a hockey linesman is to break up fights. Ashford has had a few, and volunteers his opinion on who he thinks are the NHL's toughest players:

"Orland Kurtenbach used to the the undisputed king. He never lost a fight. Now he's a bit older and not in the same shape as in past years.

"John Ferguson is tough, but has changed his style of hockey, especially over the last year. I guess he figures he can score more goals when he's not in the penalty box. But he still won't back down from anybody."

Occasionally an official will make a glaring mistake in a game. Naturally, the players will argue his decision.

What, Malcolm was asked, can a linesman say to a player when he knows he's made a bad call?

"The only thing to do is to admit to the player that you've made a mistake, and tell him there's nothing that can be done about it now. Ninety-nine per cent of the time the player will say okay, and skate away. By admitting he's made a mistake when he knows he has, the linesman earns repect from the players.

"The referee is in a different position, however. His calls sometimes can directly affect the outcome of a game, and it's more difficult for him to admit he's made a mistake.

"Usually the only person to whom a referee will admit he's made a mistake is himself."

Ashford explains the top six referees in the NHL have respect from the majority of the players. Younger officials don't have as much authority, simply because it's something they have to acquire over the years.

●

"The biggest thing an official has to concern himself with is getting the respect of the players," Ashford says. "Without respect an official's authority is challenged."

Malcolm hopes to be working full-time in the NHL when the 1970-71 hockey season rolls around. If he makes it, he'll join a rather select group.

Veteran referee Lloyd Gilmour, and another hopeful, Bob McLaren, and Ashford are the only officials living west of the Rockies to have been considered for NHL duty.

Malcolm's off-season time is divided among several activities. During June he works in the sporting department of a local store, in July and August he conducts his own referee and hockey schools in Esquimalt, he attends a referees' school in Banff in September, and starts the NHL's referee training camp later the same month.

"Ever since I came over from England I've been a fan of hockey," Malcolm admits. "In my mind, there's no other game that can match it."

Now, through hard work, dedication and ability this young Victorian is no longer just a fan.

Hurdler Cracks Record for 440

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Brigham Young's Ralph Mann broke the world record for the 440-yard hurdles Saturday at the NCAA outdoor track and field meet.

He was timed at 48.8 seconds, smashing the mark of 49.3 seconds set by Gert Potgieter of South Africa in 1960.

The runner-up to Mann, Wayne Collett of UCLA, also bettered the world record. He was timed at 49.2

Century Inn edged Gilmour Construction, 4-3, to take over sole possession of first place from idle Colwood Inn in the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League Tuesday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Century would not be on top if shortstop Bob Custance had not come through with a spectacular diving catch when Gilmour's Bob Walton slammed a line drive with the bases loaded and two out in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Three of Century's runs were scored in the second frame while the game-winning tally came in the third when Flay Hall hit a double and scampered home on Barney Spaven's single.

Custance did not manage a hit on four trips to the plate but was outstanding in the infield, throwing out three runners, including the second and third outs when Gilmours threatened in the seventh frame.

Bill Carlow drove in two Gilmour runs on a single in the sixth inning.

"VIVAT!"

This is the call you hear from the side lines as the boys encourage their teammates to score.

IF YOU WOULD LIKE YOUR SON TO HAVE A BOARDING SCHOOL EDUCATION — BUT AS A DAY BOY, THEN—

CONSIDER THESE ADVANTAGES:

- Syllabus based on the requirements of the Provincial Government Education Department and College Entrance Examination Board.
- Teaching Staff hand picked — each a specialist in his own field.
- Sports and other planned activities organized to encourage leadership, the capacity to co-operate and the ability to get along with others.
- The development of personal integrity through the encouragement of self-discipline.
- A balanced training designed to develop the all-round boy, who can confidently meet the challenges of the future.

With our unique location at Mount Tolmie, serving all of Greater Victoria, we have decided to increase our day boy enrollment by 40%. This means that a day boy can have exactly the same education, training and advantages as a boarder — for a little more than ⅓ the fee.

Phone for an appointment with the Headmaster, Mr. R. L. Gordon, B.A. (Alberta), A.M. (Oxon) (Rhodes scholar). He will be glad to discuss your son's education and future with you.

'QUIET LOSERS IN GAME OF LIFE'

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — A plea to bring 750,000 youngsters back into the mainstream of life has been issued by a private commission after a 3½-year study of emotional and learning disorders among Canadian children.

The fact-packed volume also unleashed scathing criticism of current aid programs, which it said leave many such children "quiet losers in the game of life."

The present system of schools and aid programs are a hodgepodge of overlapping jurisdictions and cross purposes, complicated by petty professional jealousies, it says.

The study says 1,000,000 Canadian children up to age 19 are affected by emotional and learning disorders and only a quarter of them are getting adequate treatment.

"In any other field a problem of this magnitude would be heralded as an acute epidemic or a national disaster."

Commissioned by seven welfare, health and educational organizations, the study makes a strong pitch for public support.

RARELY DRAMATIC

"The children we are concerned about are rarely dramatic—they don't have much public appeal until you understand their problems and the frustration and anger of their parents in their search for help.

"These children suffer from varying degrees of emotional crippling. Some are retarded, some are mentally handicapped.

"Almost all have problems in learning and gradually fall farther and farther behind in school until they fail or are forced to drop out. They are often the quiet losers in the game of life."

It calls for a halt to the system of dividing these youngsters "into pieces," with teachers trying to teach them and doctors trying to make them healthy.

It says this procedure may compound the problems by cutting a child off from his family and friends. "Frequently, by the way we handle him, we make him even more different."

Each child should be treated in a way that would enhance his personal dignity.

GROUPS JOINED FORCES

The commission was set up by the Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded, the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, the Canadian Education Association, the Canadian Mental Health Association, the Canadian Rehabilitation Council for the Disabled, the Canadian Welfare Council and Dr. Barnardo's, a British-based organization that has studied children in many countries.

R. H. Shannon headed the 11-member commission which created a study committee under Dr. Charles A. Roberts, head of the psychiatry department at the University of Ottawa, and Dr. Denis Lazure, executive director of Riviere-des-Prairies Hospital in Montreal.

The study was released at a news conference Tuesday.

It stresses the point that, as far as possible, the child's connections with his family and his school companions should be maintained.

It cites instances where, in order to get publicly-financed help for a disturbed child, families have first had to make their child a public ward.

"We saw families falling apart when a little temporary help and support to relieve the strain could have maintained a home base for the child."

TEACHERS HAMPERED

Because of a fragmented approach, teachers working with disturbed children have been denied medical information about their students because they were not considered part of the "medical team," the report said.

This kind of professional jealousy should be replaced by effort "to support the school and to reinforce the positive contribution that the classroom teacher can make to the development of the child."

Overworked professionals — doctors, nurses, teachers — should be helped by lay assistants, it said.

Nursery, kindergarten, preschool and day care programs should be expanded, and priority for attendance should be given to children who are handicapped physically, socially or educationally.

The educational grading system should be revised, permitting the student to progress through the system at his own speed. Needs, interests and abilities of children should be determining factors in their studies, rather than mastery of a set quota of specific knowledge.

SUGGESTS LOCAL UNITS

The country should be divided into population units ranging in size from 25,000 to 50,000 persons. For each such unit, there would be a community board to promote, plan and run a co-ordinated network of personal care services.

Recipe of the Week

Poultry

Right now poultry is your best value buy as it is plentiful and low priced, making it an excellent budget-stretcher. Poultry readily lends itself in so many tasty ways, at any time of the year. Versatility is its middle name . . . as an elegant gourmet dish . . . or a wholesome family meal . . . a dish with international flavour . . . or even for a 'quickie' snack. It is equally as popular for barbecues, family menus, picnics, and formal dinners. At Woodward's you'll find just the size and type of poultry at budget pleasing prices . . . see for yourself this week.

Barbecued Chicken With Wine

2 cups olive oil
2 cups vinegar
1 cup dry white wine
1 tbles. snipped parsley
1 tbles. salt
2 tsps. oregano
2 tsps. red pepper flakes
1 tsp. thyme
1 clove garlic, minced
2 broiler fryers (about 2 lbs. each) split in half

Combine all ingredients except the chicken, mix well in saucepan, heat to boiling. Coat chicken halves with sauce, place on grill over hot coals. Baste frequently with hot sauce and turn several times so that chicken cooks evenly on both sides. Cool until fork tender (about 1¼ hours). Serve hot and pass any extra around. Serves 4.

Goldberg Wins Nomination In Surprising N.Y. Primary

NEW YORK (AP) — In a primary full of upsets and firsts, Democrats nominated Arthur J. Goldberg, former United States Supreme Court Justice, Tuesday to oppose three-term Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Two veteran Democratic congressmen, Adam Clayton Powell and Leonard Farbstein, were defeated.

Powell, 61, unbeatable in Harlem for 25 years, was defeated narrowly by state Assemblyman Charles Rangel, 40, a Negro who also has Republican backing. Powell recently underwent treatment for cancer but said his doctors had given him a clean bill of health.

For the first time, the Democrats nominated a Negro, state Senator Basil Paterson of Harlem, for lieutenant-governor. Herman Badillo of the Bronx won a chance to become the state's first Puerto Rican-borne U.S. congressman.

In his first bid for elective office, Goldberg, 61, defeated millionaire Howard Samuels, 50. The state's first governorship primary in nearly 50 years drew only 27 per cent of the Democrats despite perfect weather. The Republicans had no statewide contests.

Primaries in the United States serve the same purpose as nominating conventions in Canada —to select candidates for general elections. In U.S. primaries, only registered voters can cast ballots for politicians seeking their party's nominations.

WILL OPPOSE GOODELL

Another millionaire, Representative Richard Ottinger of suburban Westchester County, won a four-man race to oppose Republican Senator Charles E. Goodell, appointed by Rockefeller to complete the term of the late Robert F. Kennedy.

Returns from 13,161 of the 13,735 election districts gave Goldberg 491,006 votes, Samuels 445,578.

In the Senate race, returns from 12,416 districts gave Ottinger 323,822, Paul O'Dwyer, 265,095, Theodore Sorensen 136,930, and Representative Richard Max McCarthy 95,587.

Goldberg, former secretary of labor and United Nations ambassador is the first man of national stature the Democrats have sent against Rockefeller since Rockefeller ousted Gov. Averell Harriman in 1958.

SEES SELF 'CONCILIATOR'

The former union negotiator, judge and diplomat campaigned as a "conciliator." He called the nomination of Paterson "more important than mine" because he is the first black nominated for statewide office in New York.

Consumer Advocate Block Attempted

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has launched a lobbying effort to throttle legislation that would create a powerful consumer advocate in the federal government.

The Chamber's efforts have not yet been successful. Republican members of a Senate subcommittee haven't gone along with the Chamber's proposal to bury the consumer advocate's office in the Civil Service Commision.

Moreover, the U.S. House government operations committee Tuesday approved a far-reaching bill to create an independent consumer protection agency. Ralph Nader terms it "the most important consumer legislation ever."

The House bill would make permanent the White House office of consumer affairs and establish an independent consumer protection agency to represent consumer interests.

A Senate government operations subcommittee is considering a similar bill, offered by the Nixon administration, that would make permanent the White House consumer affairs office and create a consumer counsel in the justice department rather than an independent agency.

Charles Mack, chief of the Chamber of Commerce consumer issue committee, said Tuesday that portions of all the bills are unacceptable.

Senate GOP sources said Mack's proposal to place the consumer advocate's office in the Civil Service Commisssion was worked out with aides of Virginia Knauer, the President's special assistant for consumer affairs.

A spokesman for Mrs. Knauer said the idea was discussed with Mack a year ago. Mack met with Mrs. Knauer two weeks ago to discuss "many different proposals," the spokesman said, but "we're going to stick by" the administration bill.

Teachers Get 10 Per Cent

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for Metropolitan Toronto's 11,150 public school teachers reached a tentative agreement with Metro's six boards of education Tuesday night providing an over-all wage increase of about 10 per cent in one year.

The new salary scale, if accepted, offers beginning teachers a range of $5,400 to $8,900, and a maximum salary scale for veterans of from $7,200 to $15,300.

Fringe benefits include two-thirds payment of the cost of Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan, and 60 per cent of a group life insurance plan, also new in this contract.

Terrorism Protested

SAIGON (Reuters) — South Vietnam has protested to the International Control Commission over 227 alleged Viet Cong terrorist acts in South Vietnam during last month.

The foreign ministry today said a note was sent to the ICC detailing the acts in which 493 civilians were reported killed, 158 kidnapped and 1,376 injured.

The note also said that in the first five months of this year 1,662 civilians were killed, 914 kidnapped and 4,581 wounded in 894 acts of terrorism.

The ICC, comprising representatives from Canada, India and Poland, was set up to supervise the 1954 Geneva agreements on Indochina.

Big Contract Awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The navy has announced it has awarded the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corp. of Pascagoula, Miss., a potential $2,100,000,000 contract for construction of 30 new destroyers. The vessels are to be built at the new $130,000,000 shipyards of Ingalls, a division of Litton Industries.

There will also be stalls of attic treasures, white elephants, home baking, books, records, hats and fun flowers.

New Deal Asked for Problem Learners

OTTAWA (CP) — A report released today by the Commission on Emotional and Learning Disorders in Children calls for a radical reorganization of services to help about 1,000,000 young Canadians.

The report, called One Million Children, is based on a national, three-year study by an 11-member committe of educationists, psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers. Its co-chairmen are Charles A. Roberts, chairman of the psychiatry department at the University of Ottawa, and Denis Lazure, executive director of the Riviere-des Prairies Hospital in Montreal.

Its work was sponsored by seven organizations, including the Canadian Mental Health Association and the Canadian Welfare Council. Its 144 recommendations amount to a new deal for children who are neurotic, retarded, have specific learning difficulties, are judged to be delinquent, are culturally or emotionally deprived or who have sensory or physical handicaps likely to lead to an emotional or learning problem.

HAVE DISORDERS

"Conservative estimates tell us that one child in eight, or around one million Canadians under 20 years of age, have an emotional or learning disorder that will prevent optimal development unless some intervention takes place," the report says.

"Canada has neither the manpower nor the financial resources to handle a problem of this magnitude outside the regular systems of child care. ..."

The child had to be kept within the regular school system and all the helping resources of the community should be mobilized to support the school and reinforce the classroom teacher's work in developing the child.

In keeping with this, the committee recommended a reorganization of special education for children with emotional or learning disorders so that it is carried on in the regular classroom rather than in separate, segregated classes and schools.

SYSTEM MUST CHANGE

It asked for significant changes in teacher training, many changes in the school system generally, and a co-operative attitude by professionals working in the field as well as among different departments and services.

In sketching the background for its recommendations, the study committee said it found distressing divisions between many of the services and helping professions which were all working separately to aid children.

These divisions were intolerable and led to a fragmented effort when a total, co-ordinated drive was needed.

"We frequently saw instances of information vital to the success of the educational endeavor denied to the teacher because he is not part of the medical team. We saw schools standing by helpless when a child needed psychiatric care because they had no access to clinical services in the community.

"We saw parents forced to relinquish guardianship of their child because only as a ward could the cost of residential care be paid from public funds. We saw families falling apart when a little temporary help and support to relieve the strain could have maintained a home base for the child."

The committee said it is convinced that the way of providing care must be reshaped to put the child at the centre.

Victoria Area Organizer Sought For Canadian Housewives Register

The Canadian Housewives Register is a new women's organization gaining popularity throughout Canada.

It's not a Who's Who of housewives nor is it militant women's liberation movement.

It is an attempt to get women of similar tastes together in informal groups for "intelligent conversation and discussion of any topic that is NOT domestic."

In a letter from Toronto, national organizer Ena Bradley writes:

"Most people know the difficulty of making new friends, especially ones with similar interests. The idea of the CHR is to help combat the loneliness and stagnation that many housewives feel especially at this time of year when so many are moving from city to city.

There are now 20 groups in Toronto and 18 in Montreal, as well as a few in the Maritimes, the Western provinces and the Northwest Territories.

"We have had several inquiries from the Victoria area," Mrs. Bradley writes, but so far we lack an organizer to get a group started."

Groups meet once a week, or less frequently depending on members' preference.

Programs are flexible, arranged to suit the needs of the group, and can be as varied as glass-blowing or flowermaking, discussion of controversial topics, speakers or tours.

The main purpose, however, is to provide an opportunity to get out of the domestic rut, meet other women with similar tastes and inquiring minds.

Membership in CHR, which is affiliated with a similar organization in Great Britain where there are 400 groups, is open to any housewife in Canada. The only qualification is a lively mind.

Most women are in the 25-45 age group with young families, and they help with each others children. Most have had some training before marriage, and often their husband's profession requires frequent moves to different parts of the country.

A brochure giving further details about this informal group is available from Jean Wylie, 88 Clementine Square, Scarborough, Ontario.

Tender Loving Care 'Only Way'—Chuvalo

TORONTO (CP) — Wives should be treated with tender loving care says George Chuvalo, Canadian heavyweight boxing champion.

"Treat them gentle. It's the only way."

Chuvalo was commenting on a recent statement by Hamilton psychiatrist Dr. Stuart Smith that many women in mental hospitals are driven there by "emotionless, tough guy" husbands.

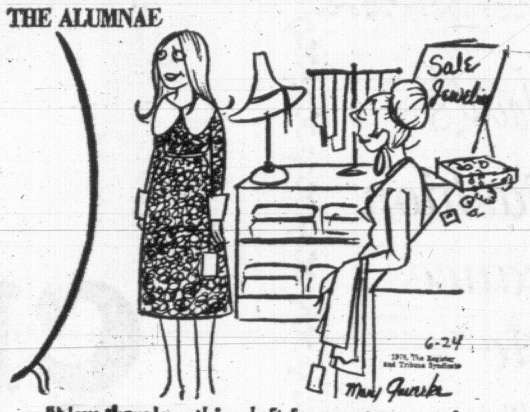
Dr. Smith told delegates at the Canadian Conference on Social Welfare that young boys should be encouraged to baby sit without being labelled "momma's boys."

"I baby-sit my own kids," Chuvalo said in an interview Friday.

He says the so-called tough guys should be told that a woman needs love and affection.

"It's only the guys who doubt their masculinity who act that way anyway. They're insecure. If you're a real man, you have nothing to fear in letting your emotions show."

THE ALUMNAE



"Now there's nothing left for men to appreciate about me except myself."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Father Honored

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There is one thing that has irked me for 13 years. My son's wife makes a point of seating her father at the head of the table whenever she has a dinner party.

I have sworn to myself that the next time she does this I would get up and leave, but I never do. I am afraid one of these times I will burst.

This son of mine is no slouch. He's a big, handsome guy. Former football player, a good husband, and has a good job. He is also a gentleman. Perhaps it would be best if I just refused future invitations to dinner. Am I a fool? — Irked No End.

DEAR IRKED I wouldn't call you a "fool"—but I do think you are needlessly exercised over a trival incident. Rather than indicating a lack of respect for her husband (if that's what you read into you daughter-in-law's seating arrangement) perhaps she is attempting to show "special respect" to her father. The two are not necessarily "competing." In any case, it's her dinner table, and if her husband feels put down, let him speak up.

DEAR ABBY: When a woman takes a married man away from his wife and family, do you think that woman can ever be happy with that man? — San Carlos.

DEAR SAN: Sometimes. She's like the woman who buys a secondhand washing machine. She doesn't care where it came from—as long as it works.

DEAR ABBY: I think you are wrong! I taught my children to answer the telephone with, "Who is this?" And if the party on the other end doesn't identify himself, I tell my children to hang up.

This telephone is installed for my convenience, and I see no reason why people should object to identifying themselves. They wouldn't think of calling a business office and asking to talk to the boass without identifying themselves first! — Staten Island.

DEAR STATEN: Listen carefully, please:

I, too, believe all telephone callers should identify themselves. We disagree only on what the child is taught to say when he answers the telephone. In my opinion, "Who is this?" is rude.

A simple "Hello" is proper, after the caller is given a chance to identify himself, and ask, "May I speak to your mother?" If the caller does not identify himself, the child should then ask, "Who is calling, please?" This should offend no one.

But a child who answers the phone with, "Who is this?" offends many.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"Several girls at the office have refused to take vacations this year because it would mean two weeks without seeing me."

General Kisses General: 'Protocol'

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The first two women generals in United States military history received their silver stars recently and also got congratulatory kisses from the army chief of staff, Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

Formally elevated to the rank of brigadier-general were Anna Mae Mays, 50, chief of the Army Nurse Corps, and Elizabeth P. Hoisington, 52, director of the Women's Army Corps.

Army Secretary Stanley R. Resor and Westmoreland presided at the Pentagon ceremony.

After helping to pin the stars on Miss Hays, Westmoreland said he was establishing a new protocol for congratulating women generals and kissed her on the lips.

When Miss Hoisington's turn came, he kissed her also "in accordance with well-established protocol."

THE GOOD LONG WAY

CUT: Very, very long hair is required for this style. The ends are blunt edged.

TO SET: The largest sized rollers are used just to give a bend to the hair.

TO COMB: The hair is brushed back from the brow then down from temples at the sides and the side sections are then arranged in loose braids. The back section floats down the middle.

Hats Rank With Diamonds As a Girl's Best Friend

NEW YORK (AP) — "Outside of diamonds and men, hats are just about women's favorite thing," was a line from the Millintery Institute of America's fall fashion showing.

Now, that'a a little extreme. Some women see hats as just another item to add to wardrobe bills. Hats take up space in closets, to say nothing of suitcases.

There's no doubt, however, that the hat is making a big comeback, along with every other accessory known to woman.

Hats can do something special, though. A few models in Tuesday's show at the Americana Hotel walked out hatless. Then they put hats on. It was like sudden chic.

The word is: Hats go with everything this year except nightgowns: midiskirts, pants, evening clothes. One of the greatest hats was Adolfo's black felt with a Three Musketeers feather curling on one side.

This fall, hats won't be junked up. They're dignified and tasteful, in general. The only sillies are some cocktail hats with tickle feathers.

sew simple

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer, I just completed a silk cocktail dress and trimmed it with some beautiful jewel trimming. I sewed it on very carefully but, when it was finished, the dress looked pulled and actually gathered under the trim. What other method could have been used? Mrs. J. P. P.

Dear Mrs. J. P. P.: Several factors could have caused this and I shall mention two of them since I haven't actually seen your dress.

First, it is possible that the trimming wasn't flexible enough to go around a curved area and it might also have been too heavy for the weight of your dress. There are so many different types of jeweled trimming that are available, be sure to check these points out before makeing a purchase.

Another important point to remember is this: even if the trimming is completely flexible, you must pin and baste the outer edge smoothly in place first. After this is finished, you will notice the inner edge which will be closest to the neckline of your garment, will look slightly full; this can be eased in as you sew it it position. Many women have found that if they run a hand basting with a small stich around this inner edge it makes it much easier to position smoothly.

If you were to work with the inner edge first, there wouldn't be enough of the trim to fit the larger area and this of course could cause the puckering. Never sew any kind of trim on with tiny tight stitches. Always work with a looser thread to avoid that nailed-down look.

Little Sisters Reap Tourist Profits for Order's School

By DANIEL DROSDOFF

SAN CARLOS DE BARILOCHE, Argentina (UPI) — A woman of imagination and enterprise is Rosa Cavina, Mother Superior of the Little Sisters of Our Lady of Rosario.

Five years ago the Little Sisters, of an Argentine order of nuns that specializes in education and hospital assistance work, ran out of money and were forced to halt construction on a two-storey school building four and one-half miles from Bariloche.

"We just went broke," said sister Rose who heads a team of four nurses at Bariloche Hospital, the only hospital in town. A 40,000 peso ($11,428) government grant wasn't enough to complete the job.

For a while the Sisters fretted. Then Sister Rose, 59, got an idea: why not raise the money the way everyone else was making money in Bariloche — catering to tourism?

It just so happened that the 8.6 acre lot where the building was under construction was located on the road to the Llao Llao Peninsula, a 14-mile stretch of scenic highway along lake Nahuel Huapi and connecting a string of hostels, motels, hotels, cabins and estates.

Bariloche is known as the "Switzerland of Argentina." It is a region of lakes, pine forests, and ski camps 978 miles southwest of Buenos Aires. Tourists come there on the average of 10,000 a month in the summer for camping, the cool climate, and scenery, and in winter (summer in the northern hemisphere) for skiing.

The Little Sisters, with their own muscle and some help from the townfolk, built five vacation cabins.

"The cabins are paying, and the school will be finished shortly," the Mother Superior now says with satisfaction.

They were built with pine, hammers, and nails. Doors and woodwork were donated by a rancher who was tearing down an old farmhouse at a nearby hacienda. A pump was installed to bring water from a nearby mountain stream.

The cabins, which can hold a total of 27 visitors, are heated by wood stoves. Near them is a vacant lot where campers can park cars and pitch tents for 150 centavos (43 cents). Also on the ground are a chicken coop, which provides tourists and neighbors with fresh eggs, and a cow producing fresh milk for the visitors.

The Mother Superior keeps busy. In the morning she works in the hospital and in the afternoon she tends to the cabins. Her hands have become calloused, first from wielding a hammer and saw helping to build the cabins.

Now she steadily works at feeding chickens, tending the garden, and occasionally chopping wood. The busy work doubles up when the hired man goes on vacation.

"I'm tired," she said. Her hope is to one day run the school. She resigned her administrative post last year at the hospital to avoid a transfer required by her order after 18 years in Bariloche—"They said I could head the school once it's built. She is aided by the four sisters of the same order who work in the hospital.

The cabins of the Little Sisters of Rosario are well known to the businessmen of Bariloche. Their rates are highly competitive, around 11 pesos per night per person ($3.14), about two thirds the going price.

The nuns do no advertising, but in two-and-a-half years the word of the cabins has spread rapidly.

"I have reservations for the skiing season months in advance," the Mother Superior said.

Woman, 115, Dies

SILVER CREEK, Wash. (AP) — Mary Kiona, who saw the covered wagons of the first white settlers in Washington, died last week at the home of her granddaughter. She was 115.

She claimed to be of Yakima and Cowlitz Indian descent, and her birthdate, January, 1855, is documented at the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs office in Yakima.

She lived all her life near the Cowlitz River. At the first of this year, six generations of her offspring had been recorded.

She was considered the senior member of the Cowlitz tribe. In earlier years, she made her living off the land, picking berries and fishing.

Mrs. Kiona spoke no English, and communicated in a mixture of Cowlitz and Yakima dialects.

Bedridden for the past few years, she kept active weaving baskets and engaging in other handicrafts.

Busy Year Seen

CALGARY (CP) — The geological survey of Canada will be busy this year, with much of the work directed from the Institute of Petroleum and Sedimentary Geology in Calgary, Energy Minister J. J. Greene said.

★ ★ ★

Plea Refused

REGINA (CP) — David Orton of Regina, a former professor at Sir George Williams University in Montreal, Tuesday refused to enter a plea on charges of participating in a riot.

Orton and 11 other persons were charged following a demonstration May 14 during a performance by the United States Army Field Band and Soldier's Chorus. Between 30 and 40 young people were involved in the incident which they said was to protest the war in Vietnam.

"I am not guilty of any such crime and will not give legitimacy to the slander that I am by entering a plea," Orton told court.

Grant Awarded

HUMBOLDT, Sask. (CP) — A federal grant of $512,000 has been awarded Premier Products Co. Ltd., of Preeceville, Sask., for construction of a poultry and meat processing plant in Humboldt, the department of regional economic expansion announced Tuesday.

The plant is expected to employ about 200 persons when in full production.

★ ★ ★

Delay Indicated

EDMONTON (CP) — A "World's Fair of The North," proposed for Edmonton in 1973, may not be practical until 1974 or 1975, the president of the venture said Tuesday.

Les Bodie, president of Nordex Association and an Edmonton businessman and former alderman, told the group's first annual meeting that planning for the fair, which was to have been called Nordex 73, has turned out to be a more time-consuming job than had been anticipated.

★ ★ ★

Nuclear Power

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dr. W. B. Lewis of Chalk River, Ont., a senior vice-president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Tuesday predicted nuclear energy will produce all the power in Ontario in 12 years.

★ ★ ★

Bill Introduced

WINNIPEG (CP) — A bill which would provide for compensation victims of crime was introduced for second reading in the Manitoba legislature Tuesday.

★ ★ ★

Greene Rapped

CALGARY (CP) — Mayor Rod Sykes says recent speeches by Energy Minister J. J. Greene were "a kick in the teeth" for the city.

The mayor told a news conference the minister was "completely negative and destructive" in his recent speeches and his nationalistic economic policies could discourage foreign investment in Canada.

"Investments is the key to our prosperity and it's a tragedy that people in Ottawa like Joe Greene are kicking the very foundation of our prosperity."

ROUNDUP OF B.C. NEWS

Students Offered Military Training

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is recruiting university students for military training to help ease the bleak student employment picture this summer.

Vancouver volunteers could sign up today for a seven-week course in drill, map reading and shooting.

For the first three weeks, students will get $7 a day, a Manpower Department spokesman said Tuesday. Then the rate will go to "at least $8.50."

Another federal program inviting unemployed students to a University of Victoria "cram course" in French was quickly over-subscribed last week.

The government offered to provide free tuition, books, board and lodging to 1,000 students to take the course.

★ ★ ★

Vote Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Independent Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada announced Tuesday that the union has been granted a certification vote at the British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. mill now under construction at McKenzie in north-central B.C. No date has been set for the government-supervised vote. Mill workers are presently represented by the International Woodworkers of America.

★ ★ ★

Sticks Approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday approved the purchase of 150 additional riot sticks for the police force by a 5 to 4 vote after a stormy three-hour debate.

Two delegations spoke in favor of the clubs and 14 voiced dissent. When the controversial purchase was approved, shouts of "Sieg Heil" and "Heil Hitler" filled the chamber.

★ ★ ★ ★

Needles Blamed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Increasing incidence of hepatitis in Vancouver in the last few years is due in part to drug users using dirty hypodermic needles, a health officer said Tuesday. "For instance, there was a party in which 17 kids shot speed; 12 of them used the same needle and five of them got hepatitis."

Voting by Proxy Approved by House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Tuesday cleared one of the last hurdles to giving thousands of Canadians the opportunity to vote through a proxy system.

MPs limited the right to prospectors, mariners, fishermen, students and the handicapped and ill. They turned down a proposal that would have included workers in airlines, buses, railways and trucking who work away from their riding on election day.

The decision on proxy voting came during debate at the committee stage—the step before third reading—of a bill to amend the Canada Elections Act.

The bill would lower the minimum voting age to 18 from 21 and extend voting rights to federal public servants abroad.

The Commons does not sit today, St. Jean Baptiste Day.

RISK IMPERSONATION

A government proposal that the proxy vote be given to such persons as prospectors, students and the ill was approved after the House defeated an amendment by Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) that would have extended the scheme to include transport workers.

Privy Council President Donald Macdonald said he had previously favored giving the proxy to other occupations. But he had decided it should be limited because of the problem of controlling impersonation.

Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast Chilcotin) said he had wanted the right of proxy extended to loggers but decided it "would not be very workable."

The Commons also approved an amendment that would reduce to 50 from 75 the number of electoral candidates a new group must field to be recognized officially as a party.

A party of 12 members in the Commons is automatically recognized.

The amendment by Grant Deachman (L—Vancouver Quadra) was quickly supported by Mr. Macdonald.

REQUIRE DEPOSIT

The Commons defeated 26 to 5 an amendment by Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) that would have wiped out the requirement that a candidate submit a deposit of $200 with his nomination papers.

Mr. Rowland said a candidate should not have to suffer for participating in an election. Under the legislation he would lose his deposit if he did not gain one-half the total of votes cast for the winning candidate.

Lloyd Francis (L—Ottawa West) said frivolous candidates tend to enter elections, especially municipal elections where deposits are not required.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said there have been no frivolous candidates in British Columbia provincial elections for years. Candidates had to get 50 signatures in order to run in B.C.

NEED VOTERS' NAMES

Yves Forest, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Macdonald, assured Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) that candidates would be able to learn the names of servicemen and public servants qualified to vote in their ridings.

Mr. Fortin said his party had unhappy experiences with the forces vote in past elections.

An amendment by Mr. Howard that would have extended the closing time for polls to 8 p.m. from 7 p.m. was voted down 32 to 13 even though Mr. Macdonald said he was "talked into it" by the New Democratic MP.

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste—Abitibi) proposed that electors be required to present an identification card at the poll to get a ballot. His proposal, an amendment, was defeated 37 to four.

WOMAN NAMES JAIL OF HER OWN CHOICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Freida McLaughlin, 51, Tuesday asked Provincial Court Judge J. J. Anderson for a sentence of more than two years so she could spend her time in Kingston Penitentiary.

"All my friends and relatives are there," she said after pleading guilty to presenting worthless cheques totalling $203 to two local hotels.

When she appeared here she was already under a sentence of two years less a day for similar cheque charges in Port Alberni.

A sentence less than two years would mean she would do her time at the Oakalla provincial jail. Women sentenced to more than two years are sent to the Ontario prison.

Canadians 'In Flap' Over Drugs

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Gordon Bell, a specialist in drug and alcohol addiction, said Tuesday Canadians have "gone into a flap" over the growing use of drugs.

He told a conference of the Association of Halfway House Alcoholism Programs of North America that he does not want "to minimize the problem, but there are more solutions to it than we have been saying."

Most communities have more than enough resources to cope with their own social drug and alcohol problems, said.

Dr. Bell, director of Toronto, Donwood Foundation for the treatment of all forms of addiction, said: "You don't have to have a degree to be a competent therapist." Non-medical persons were as competent, and in some cases more competent, in giving counsel and reassurance to an addict.

He said three teams should be responsible for the treatment of an addict—a medical team, the addict's family and friends, and a trained non-clinical team which helps "set a new pattern of life" for the addict.

He stressed the importance of making an addict realize that a habitual tendency cannot be stopped with less than a year's treatment.

According to Tom Jones This IS Tom Jones

By JUDITH MARTIN

WASHINGTON (WP) — Tom Jones gave a press conference before his opening at the Merriweather Post Pavilion in Columbia, MD., and seemed politely puzzled about the way his pop superstar act can be taken amiss by some.

This, according to Tom Jones, is Tom Jones:

● He has been happily married since he was 16 and resents fan magazines' suggestions that he runs around with other women, an idea which he considers "silly."

● He wouldn't do a nude scene because he thinks it's illegal.

● He has never been aware that any groupies were after him, or that any fan wanted more from him than an autograph or a shred of clothing.

● He has never taken drugs and considers them "a terrible thing" although he did have some pep pills about four years ago in an attempt to stay awake.

● He doesn't drink "any more than anybody else."

● He has quit smoking cigarettes but has an occasional cigar.

● He has no interest in any kind of politics, including the Welsh National Movement.

All of which may or may not explain how he has successfully achieve his goal of bringing televised and night-club sex to the middle-aged woman who hasn't had a good thrill since early Liberace.

The combination of on-stage gyrations and implied crudity with professed wholesomeness is no accident. When we started out, his style was more of the young-oriented British fashion of the time, but he soon realized that "the bookings were coming from older people, so that's the way I went."

And that's how he got to be the all-American—sorry, all-Welsh — boy, whose favorite song is Autumn Leaves and whose idea of a good time, he says, is to stay up late talking with the musicians in his show.

A curly-haired young man with a bad complexion, he was wearing what he described as "very ordinary clothing" — brown turtleneck shirt and jacket, modified bell bottoms and brown boots—for his press conference.

And then he answered questions—he'll probably do films next but has no immediate plans; the cross he wears is a present from his wife, who is Catholic; it doesn't particularly embarrass him when fans throw their pantyhose on stage, but then it doesn't particularly excite him either. And yes, being rich and successful is just the way he thought it would be—it feels good.

But just when you thought everybody would be dozing off, a nice, middle-aged woman came forward with a personal request. If it weren't too much trouble, she inquired, could she please have his soft drink glass for her very own to keep?

Tom Jones gave it to her, and she went away happily.

Hunger Protested

BELGRADE (Reuters) — A group of 14 students have gone on a hunger strike at Belgrade's school of philosophy over what they call "the plight of miners and other hungry people in Yugoslavia." This is the first public demonstration by Belgrade students since large-scale unrest two years ago.

Two Share Award

MOSCOW (Reuters) — John Lill of Britain and Vladimir Krainev of the Soviet Union shared first prize in the international Tchaikovsky Piano Competition, it has been announced. Sixty-eight entries from 22 countries took part in the competition.

MOBBED by more than 10,000 Mae West (right) makes a triumphant return to New York after an absence of more than 20 years. She was attending the premiere Tuesday night of the film Myra Breckinridge. By contrast just a trickle welcomed Raquel Welch (left) who plays the title role in the film. (AP Wirephoto.)

Bougainvillea Needs Pruning

By HILDA BEASTALL

Bougainvillea belongs in the group of glamorous climbing plants needing a bit of extra deference before success can be counted on. In Brazil, the plant's native habitat is likely to be lowland hillsides where it can scramble at will among trees which give natural protection around the lower stems and over the root area.

Hilda

Usually we see it here as a greenhouse climber, though occasionally grown in containers which are put outdoors in warm sunny corners to flower in summer.

One reader tells me of growing a young purchased plant outdoors, having tremendous results with amount of vine, but no luck with flowering.

This follows the pattern of wistaria, a hardier climber from Asia.

Under cultivation in our climate with its short warm summer period but long mild spring, bougainvillea will need to be hard pruned to encourage flowering.

The papery rosy-mauve bracts which enclose the tiny insignificant flowers, are borne on short spur growths. These are produced by pruning the long branches made the previous year.

Each growth should be cut back to its main stem, leaving a one-inch spur.

If this is done in spring, just when growth is about to commence, perhaps mid April or early May according to the general weather pattern, the climber's energy for the season would be channeled into making flowerbuds instead of growth buds.

Apart from this need for pruning, general culture for bougainvillea is simple enough. Any well drained soil will suit, either in a pot in a greenhouse or in a heat trapping patio corner.

Give it some good compost and old manure, sand for drainage and ample watering after growth begins.

Even a small young plant will bloom if the prvious year's shoots are pruned back in spring to make the one-inch spurs.

Several varieties have been offered for sale locally in recent years with varying success for gardeners, according to the understanding of their needs.

Bougainvilleas cannot be expected to withstand a winter such as 1968-9. It is then that having a couple of small rooted plants under cover is insurance which pays off.

If I had a plant full of growth but no flower spurs evident now, I would prune half the growths at once, and see what happens.

Next spring, the recommended hard pruning could be done in April with great expectations of success.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Flight Barely Got Off the Ground

By BOB BOWMAN

It is usually risky to say that almost anything was "first" in Canada, but what was probably the first official airmail flight was risky in another sense. It was made from Montreal to Toronto on June 24, 1918, by Captain Brian Peck, an officer of the Royal Air Force.

Peck was based at Leaside, Toronto, and one of his fellow-officers was getting married. It was felt that wine should be served after the wedding but Ontario was "dry" in those days, so Peck got permission to fly to Montreal, which was "wet", on condition that he would do some stunt flying to attract recruits.

Some cases of wine were loaded on board Peck's JN Curtiss 4 aircraft before he returned to Toronto, and the Aerial League of the British Empire asked him to carry a sack of mail as an experiment. He also had a passenger, Corporal C. W. Mathers.

The flight had the sanction of the post office and the mail was stamped June 23 before it was sent to the airfield. However, bad weather prevented Peck from taking off until the next day. The aircraft was so heavily laden (the cargo of wine was secret, of course) that Peck had to fly it under telephone and electric wires, and then bank clear of a bridge, before he could gain altitude. He landed at Kingston to refuel, which was just ordinary automobile gasoline. Then he continued to Toronto where he arrived late in the afternoon.

The mail was received officially by Postmaster W. E. Lemon and the cancelled envelopes are now prized by collectors. Some of them bear Peck's signature and were worth $250 each a few years ago. The letters are dated June 23 although the flight took place on June 24 owing to the bad weather delay in Montreal.

The first airmail flight in the world was in India in 1911 when some letters were flown five miles!

Other events on June 24:

1497 John Cabot sighted North America, probably Newfoundland or Cape Breton.

1534 Jacques Cartier discovered Prince Edward Island and may have landed at St. Peter's Bay.

1604 De Monts discovered and named St. John River.

1610 Henry Membertou, Micmac chief, was the first Indian to be baptized.

1789 Spanish explorer Martinez claimed Vancouver Island for Spain.

1807 David Thompson arrived at upper reaches of Columbia River.

1813 Laura Secord warned British of impending U.S. attack.

1829 McGill University was opened.

1880 Music of O Canada was first played at Quebec.

1890 General Middleton was convicted of looting furs during Northwest Rebellion.

1900 Grand Trunk Railway inaugurated "International Limited" between Montreal and Chicago.

1910 Gold was discovered near Stewart, B.C.

1917 House of Commons passed compulsory military service act.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

The deal diagrammed today is presented as a bridge mystery. You are informed that our South declarer misplayed his game contract. It is your job, as a bridge detective, to bring South's mistake to light.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

South captured the opening lead with his heart king, after which he laid down the king of clubs. He then led a low club, intending to finesse dummy's jack. But when West discarded a spade on the second club lead, South's hope of bringing in the club suit vanished. In time, he did make a winner out of dummy's fifth club. However, when play had ended, South had made just three clubs, two spades, two hearts, and one diamond, this suffering a one-trick set. What was his mistake?

From the very beginning, South should have realized that he needed four club tricks to fulfill his contract. Had his sights been set on this, he could have accomplished it.

Upon winning the opening lead with the heart king, a club should have been led to dummy's ace. Next would come a low club. West following suit with the eight-spot. South would insert his nine which, in the actual setup, would capture the trick.

The king of clubs would now be cashed, after which dummy would be entered via the spade ace. A fourth club lead would be taken by East's queen — and, simultaneously, the fifth club would become declarer's game-going trick.

If, in theory, West had captured South's nine of clubs with the 10, then the outstanding clubs were divided 3-2 originally. And South's king would fell the defenders' queen on the next club lead.

Even if it had been West who possessed the Q-10-8-6 of clubs, the recommended line of play would have guaranteed the making of four club tricks. The initial club lead would be taken by the board's ace, and on the second club lead, East would fail to follow suit.

South would take this trick and his king, and return his remaining club, West, possessing the Q-10 doubleton of clubs, could make only the queen, since dummy would still have the J-x-x.

JOE'S LIFE ONE BIG SMASH

DENVER (UPI) — Joe Wolcott smashes cars for both fun and profit.

He is general manager of a firm which hammers junked cars into scrap steel. For pleasure, he drives cars in a demolition derby.

"After a day at the mill, the derby is a form of relaxation for me," Wolcott explained.

fun with figures

By J A H HUNTER

We have 2358 for the game today. Using all four each time, one of each but no other digits, you form expressions for the successive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation (that's not the simple plus) or factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, powers, and the root symbol.

For example, 35 plus 8 minus 2 is a solution for 41.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 100. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send free hints to help in future games if requested.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank Dr. Perera and staff of Veterans' Hospital, for the care given to my late husband Mr. William "Pop" Bendall. Am also indebted to Padre J. Roberts and McCall Bros. for their consideration. To the many friends who sent floral tributes and letters. To all my family who were of great help in time of sorrow. I thank you all. — Mrs. Lily Bendall.

Mrs. Violet Molesworth and sister-in-law, Ivy, wish to thank Dr. Cronhelm and staff of the D.V.A. Hospital, Padre Roberts and all who kindly sent flowers and cards during the recent loss of their beloved husband and brother.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our many friends especially to the Lawn Bowlers, Saanich Fire and Police Departments and staff of St. Joseph's C.C.U. for the kindness and sympathy extended us at the death of a beloved wife, mother and grandmother. Also our deepest thanks for the many donations to the Heart Fund. — Alex Donald and family.

The kindness and sympathy shown us by our relatives, friends and former business associates is deeply appreciated. We want you all to know that we are truly grateful for the comfort you have given us in the loss of our mother. Special thanks to the wonderful nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital, Dr. J. A. Rae, Dr. Emma Smiley and the Thompson & Irving Funeral Home — Ray Willson, Edith Willson Bigelow.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DIXON—In loving memory of my dear husband, Isaiah Dixon, who passed away June 24, 1966.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last.
The world's weary troubles and trials are past.
In silence he suffered, in patience he bore,
Till God called him home to suffer no more.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife, Margaret Dixon, and family.

LAMB—In loving memory of Miss Catherine Lamb, who passed away June 24, 1969.
—Fondly remembered by brother John, niece Lilian Grace, nephew Thomas Albert and Emily.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

DES O'CONNOR. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8; 9 p.m., Channel 5. Martha Raye, Phil Harris and British singer Sandie Shaw are the guests in tonight's offering from London. The three cut loose in a haunted castle, and Des offers a spoof of crime movies. Phil sings Gentle on My Mind, Martha sings Watch the Birdie and Des sings Something, That Old Feeling, Anytime and UFOing.

★ ★ ★

NANNY AND THE PROFESSOR. 7:30 p.m., Channel 4. Nanny steps in as an automotive expert, with a solution to the second-car problem . . . a Model A that will take more than a miracle to run. But naturally, it runs, with Nanny's own special brand of attention.

★ ★ ★

VIRGINIAN. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. If You Have Tears is a tale of miscarried justice — almost. The Virginian is anxious to help clear Kyle Lawson of murder, until he meets the beautiful widow of the dead man, the person Kyle has accused of the killing. Dana Wynter is the widow, Britt Lomond is Kyle and Robert Vaughn appears as Simon Clain.

★ ★ ★

BEVERLY HILLBILLIES. 8:30 p.m., Channel 7. Soupy Sales makes a guest appearance as Jetstream Bradford, air force ace and nephew of banker Drysdale, who joins the bank staff and immeditely tries to conduct business on a military scale.

JOHNNY CASH. 9 p.m., Channel 4. Merle Haggard, Brenda Lee and Charlie Pride are the guests. The American Indian is in the spotlight when Johnny Rides This Train. Highlights include Johnny singing One More Ride, I'm Gonna Try to Be That Way, and As Long as the Grass Shall Grow. Merle Haggard sings New York City Blues and Nobody Knows. Pride sings Is Anybody Goin' to San Antone?

★ ★ ★

BEST OF THE POST. 10 p.m., Channel 2. An oldie is resurrected for the summer — television versions of the best short stories to appear in the now-defunct Saturday Evening Post over the years. Tonight it's Off the Set, a weird one about a father with a Svengali complex.

★ ★ ★

THEN CAME BRONSON. 10 p.m., Channel 5. Indian folk singer Buffie St. Marie has a guest shot as Tender Grass, in a seriocomic episode, Mating Dance for Tender Grass. Bronson gets involved in a cross-country bike race with a trio of Indians. Buffy sings Piney Wood Hills.

★ ★ ★

COMEDY CRACKERS. 10:30 p.m., Channel 2. Guests include singer Donald Lautrec, Serge Savard and Terry Harper of the Canadiens, and comedians Roy Wordsworth and Veronique Le Flaguais.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30 p.m., Channel 13: Ladies Courageous (1944 Drama), Loretta Young, Geraldine Fitzgerald. The leader of the WAF's tried to gain greater recognition for her unit.

8:30 p.m., Channel 8: Carve Her Name with Pride (1958 English drama), Virginia McKenna, Paul Scofield. True story of a brave girl working for the French Resistance during Second World War.

9 p.m., Channel 7: The Longest Hundred Miles (1966 Drama), Doug McClure, Ricardo Montalaban. A group of people attempt to flee the Japanese occupation of the Philippines during Second World War.

11:30 p.m., Channel 7: The Saint in Palm Springs (1941 mystery), George Saunders, Wendy Barrie. The Saint is entrusted to deliver three valuable stamps to a girl for her inheritance.

11:40 p.m., Channel 2: The Land is Mine (1943 Drama), Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara. A timid schoolteacher becomes a hero when his country is overrun by Nazis — fine performance by Laughton.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The idea of disease in the heart is particularly frightening. Because of the widespread idea that heart disease is commonly fatal, many men and women are thrown into a panic the minute they suspect they have it, and a cardiac neurosis, when once established, is one of the hardest of all neuroses to get rid of.

Many things in our everyday speech make all of us heart-conscious. We often say a person dies of a broken heart or of a heart attack, hence if a man gets a pain in what he thinks is his heart, or if he feels a missed beat, or if his heart races for a minute, or if he feels a little harmless air hunger, he may instantly become a badly frightened man. A patient once said to me, "An extrasystole (an extra little beat) affects me as if a cannon ball had beeen shot at my brain."

If a man is turned down for life insurance or for the Army because of a little murmur or some slight change in his electrocardiogram, he may start going from physician to physician, getting opinions.

I have seen many a person who has been badly frightened by a questionable diagnosis of coronary disease, perhaps based on an inadequate history or an inexpert interpretation of an electrocardiogram. In the worst cases of cardiac neurosis, the patient appears to be mildly psychotic.

★ ★ ★

Possibly the commonest symptom complained of by heart-conscious patients is palpitation, with a fast, pounding beat. Perhaps an attack starts without obvious cause, or it follows excitement, a fright, a cold, or some fatiguing experience.

When a woman with a tendency to palpitation comes into my office, her pulse may be running as high as 130 beats a minute. Usually, after a while it will be found to have slowed down to perhaps 80 beats a minute, and early in the morning, if the husband will count it while she is still in bed, he will find it running only 60 beats a minute.

This fact helps to make the diagnosis of a nervously overactive heart, and it rules out hyperthyroidism (an overly active thyroid gland). Especially if the patient's hands are cold, as they are likely to be, indicating that the woman is nervous, there is little need for having the basal metabolic rate estimated, as would be done if there were a suspicion of thyroid trouble.

Some worrisome persons with a fast heartbeat will be fearful that, with the excess beats, the heart will wear out. Often, they can be assured that it will not.

Others, who have a slow pulse, are afraid that it will slow still more and stop. It need not.

Nervous persons sometimes suffer from paroxysmal tachycardia (paroxysmal gives the idea of a sudden attack). In this disease the pulse suddenly starts going so fast it can hardly be counted. Later, it as suddenly resumes it normal rate. Especially when the ECG (electrocardiogram) is normal, this syndrome rarely gives any serious trouble. I have known many people who lived for many years with it. I have seen people who lost their spells when they stopped smoking cigarettes.

Another common symptom of persons with a nervous heart is the extrasystole. As most physicians know, these extra beats commonly go with an essentially normal heart. I would never make a diagnosis of heart disease simply because of these premature contractions. Nor do I like to hospitalize a patient and spend a lot of time examining him. This is likely only to increase his fear.

In the case of nervous persons, a fast pulse or a missing beat may appear for the first time after some trying physic experience, or during convalescence with some illness such as influenza, or it may come as the result of smoking too much or drinking too much coffee. I have noticed that many rather insensitive persons remain unconscious of extrasystoles, while others, probably more sensitive, are much upset by them.

Another common symptom, usually seen in a woman who fears heart disease, is air hunger, or a feeling that air is not getting down deep enough into her lungs, or is not supplying enough oxygen. This has nothing to do with the heart, but is nervous in origin. Many women will say that they are smothering, and they will then fan themselves. Waking at night with the distress, they may jump out of bed and run to a window to get more air.

The important point is that this symptom comes at any time and is not brought on by exertion or anger. It may be brought on by the psychic impression of being in a closed room. Many sensitive and migrainous women cannot stand a closed, air-conditioned room.

A woman suffering from air hunger will sometimes, in her fright, start hyperventflating, or panting rapidly, like a dog, and with this there will soon come an alarming wooziness, giddiness, or faintness, together perhaps with numbness and tingling in the hands and around the mouth. This will stop when she stops her panting.

★ ★ ★

Many nervous women who often feel faint, or tend to faint easily, think they are subject to heart disease. Actually, faintness in a person who is up and about is much more likely to be due to overemotionality, poor nervous stability, or the migrainous constitution. Still another symptom sometimes ascribed to a supposed heart disease, is, off an on for years, a sense of fatigue. This is often due to a poor nervous inheritance, and often to a constitutional frailness.

Some persons get upset and frightened because of a feeling of gas under the heart, but an excess of gas need not have anything to do with the heart. Other highly neurotic persons are frightened by what they call choking spells, probably due to hysteria.

Some young women, too young ever to have a real angina pectoris (heart pain) complain of an ache over the heart and down the left arm. It may cause them to drop things out of the left hand. It comes, not with exercise, but with fatigue, and it may come off and on during a lifetime. Obviously, it is not an angina. In some such women it may perhaps be a forerunner of hypertension (high blood pressure); in some women I knew, it "ran in the family."

Race Labels To Remain On Blood

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) —The Louisiana legislature refused Tuesday to take racial labels off blood to be used for transfusions. One member declared he would sooner see his family die than receive a drop of Negro blood.

Others in opposition said it was not a racial issue. Forty-two of the 105 House members voted in favor of the resolution to suspend a state law making mandatory the labelling of blood for transfusion by the race of its donor. Thirty voted against the bill and 33 were either absent or chose not to vote.

The measure needed 53 votes to pass.

"I would like to appeal to reason and not emotion and ask you to do likewise," said Representative Ernest Morial of New Orleans, the only Negro in the state legislature and sponsor of the resolution.

At stake, Morial said, is $50,000,000 in federal funds which may be cut off if the law is not suspended or repealed.

ONTARIO LABOR RELATIONS

Unions Attack Act Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Proposed amendments to the Labor Relations Act were welcomed here by Ontario contractors but criticized by labor.

Contractors said they hope the proposed reforms, introduced in the Ontario legislature Monday, will give them a stronger hand against powerful unions.

Labor leaders complained the legislation is discriminatory.

"As far as unions are concerned, it's one step forward and two steps back," said Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers Union.

The proposed legislation allows construction companies to form their own employers' unions, guarantees strikers their jobs back six months after a strike has started and makes unions and companies liable to pay damages for illegal strikes and lockouts.

Labor Minister Dalton Bales, who introduced the amendments, said they are expected to "help correct an economic imbalance of power," and bring to an end inflationary wage increases.

'STEPS AROUND ISSUES'

Mr. McDermott said the legislation "steps around the important issues."

"It still permits the use of strikebreakers in a legal strike. This must be prohibited."

Harry Simon, a director of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the legislation "only intends to hamstring the unions and make them weaker."

He said tougher fines for illegal strikes are a "regressive step" because unions usually have no control over wildcat strikes and are being punished for something they cannot help.

Eamon Park, assistant Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America, termed the legislation a "rabbit-and-elephant" affair with the unions being the rabbits.

'LEAD TO APARTHEID'

Donald Montgomery, president of the Labor Council of Metropolitan Toronto, said the amendments will lead to a "labor apartheid, like the apartheid in South Africa."

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said the legislation is "an apparent attempt to reduce the power of unions in the construction industry."

Contractors indicated the proposed legislation will give them what they have always wanted —a strong employer's union to bargain with their solidly-unionized workers.

"All I can say is that it is very encouraging," said Peter Allen, executive vice-president of the Ontario Federation of Construction Associations.

Eric Hartley, national vice-president of the Canadian Construction Association, said the new legislation "will certainly give us a better balance of power."

In New Green Giant Stews, the meat does all the talking.

WE GOT TOGETHER FOR A GREAT MEAL

I'M THE "TWICE-AS-MANY-MEATBALLS" MEATBALL STEW

I LOOK HOMEMADE 'CAUSE I'M CUT IN BIG CHUNKY PIECES

SURE AN' I'M WEARIN' THICK, RICH GRAVY

These four new stews come from the Garden in the Valley.

That means the potatoes, carrots and peas are picked for flavor and freshness.

But in Green Giant Brand Stews, it's the meat that has most of the say. There's not only plenty of it, it's the finest quality the Giant can find. It even looks homemade because the pieces are random cut, the way you'd do it in your own kitchen.

And every delicious stew is topped with a rich, hearty gravy.

Tomorrow, get together with the Giant for a great new meal.

FREE! GROWTH CHART

The Green Giant would like you to try his new stews, so he's offering a free growth chart with your purchase of two tins. Look for the big display at your food store. Or send 2 Green Giant Brand Stew labels and twenty-five cents to cover mailing and handling costs to: Green Giant Growth Chart, Box 4200, St. John, New Brunswick.

Handicapped Camp Open To Penniless

LAKE COWICHAN — No handicapped child or adult will be turned away from the Kiwanis Handicapped Children's camp here because of lack of money.

Although there is a charge to the camper of $8 per day, director Larry Glover stressed no one would be refused.

Glover said all except diabetics are accepted at the camp operated by the B.C. Society for Crippled Children.

Sessions at the camp, financed by donations raised through the Lions Easter Seal campaign and donations from service groups and individuals begin Friday.

Under the guidance of 12 paid counsellors, a registered nurse and a cook, campers will participate in waterfront, athletic and games, and nature lore activities.

FREQUENT OUTINGS

"We also have night camp fires with sing-songs and entertainment provided by groups from Lake Cowichan," said Glover. "There are frequent outings, including one to the Cowichan Forest Museum."

Glover said anyone interested in assisting in the handicapped camp's program will be welcome as a volunteer counsellor either for one session or for the entire summer.

There will be five groups of campers attending for eight-day sessions until the end of August.

There are still openings for many of the sessions, Glover said. Priority is given to Island residents but applications are accepted from the mainland.

Some Company for Old Age: Chalets Full of Tourists

By DONNA CLEMENTS

YOUBOU — The conception of Edelweiss Chalets, as well as every phase of design and construction, has been a Horyna family project.

Joseph Horyna, 54, looks upon his five chalet complex on Sa-seen-os Road, Youbou, as his retirement plan.

His 25-year-old son, Gunter, and wife Annelie, have applied their skills as well to the business which will officially open at the end of June.

The Austrian Family moved from Vienna to Vancouver island in 1954 and have been residents of Youbou for 13 years.

The men work at B.C. Forest Products Ltd., Cowichan sawmill division at Youbou. Horyna, mill electrician, said the two-acre site with over 550 feet of Cowichan Lake frontage was purchase 10 years ago as an investment.

"I started looking into my retirement and decided to build the first motel in Youbou," he said. "My wife likes company too."

Horyna's constructed their double A-frame house and decided to build the type of chalets found in their homeland.

"We started building the first A-fame chalet about one and a half years ago," he said. "It was my own design and we wanted to lay it out to see how it worked. After the first one we started to prefab four more in one shot. It took us a little over five months to do the prefab ones and now we have five chalets."

The men in the family constructed the fir frame with a natural outside cedar finish, split the shakes, installed the plumbing, and wired the chalets.

Mrs. Horyna then completed the interior decorating. Her husband built the kitchen cabinets.

Horyna said they plan to visit Austria in the fall to gather ideas on furnishings their chalets in alpine style.

He said they may eventually form a construction company because their A-frame design is popular.

"Our fall and winter project will be to construct a sauna and laundromat," he said.

CHIP SPILLAGE PROBLEM

Ultimatum Issued to Mill

DUNCAN — Management of Crofton Pulp and Paper Ltd. has been warned that its wood chip spillage problem must be rectified by Tuesday or they can be prosecuted.

Kurt Horn, president of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, said he was advised of the warning by district conservation officer G. W. Winsby.

Winsby told Horn that by the end of this month new Fisheries Act legislation should be in force and this will enhance the department's ability to prosecute violators.

Horn said the reply from Winsby was in reference to SPEC's demand that legal action be taken against the mill for "Its continual spillage of wood chips into the Crofton harbor. Had the fisheries department refused to act on this matter I was prepared to attempt legal action as a private citizen.

'Winsby further stated that the mill had replied expressing their concern with the problem and had informed all their suppliers that, in future all wood chip scows were to be kept in good repair and no overloading would be tolerated," said Horn.

Mill manager Bill Reynolds said the mill hopes to have the chip problem under control soon and that, although special aprons were designed to prevent spillage during unloading operations, the main problem lies with overloaded scows.

[illegible] to investigate the [illegible] loading of scows.

Reynolds said his company also plans to install a containment boom which would prevent spilled chips from floating away, but he stresses the main objective of future measures is the prevention of chip spillage.

Skydiver Holds Back

Victoria skydiver Roger Foley will not make another attempt at a world skydiving record — at least as long as he operates out of Duncan airport.

This time last year he broke his ankle after making his 107th jump in a bid to top a world record of 150 jumps in one day, set at Abbotsford.

Shortly after Foley's accident that record was toppled in Toronto where a skydiver made 200 jumps in one day.

Foley says Duncan has no facilities for night jumping and he would have to start at midnight in order to make more than 200 jumps.

Asked if he would consider making a bid at another airport, Foley replied: "No, it wouldn't mean the same thing in enemy territory."

Short Wave Club Plans Field Day

50 amateur radio operators will take part in a 24-hour field day, sponsored by the Victoria Short Wave Club, starting at noon Saturday.

Officials say about $5,000 worth of transmitters and receivers will be used during the exercise at Seabluff Farm, Metchosin, all powered by two portable 10,000-watt generators on loan from Civil Defence and the Department of National Defence.

The field day is a simulated emergency test co-ordinated by the American Radio Relay League of Newington, Conn.

Gas Destroyed

DENVER (AP) — A spokesman for Rocky Mountain Arsenal says the depot has chemically destroyed its entire stock of VS nerve gas, a deadly chemical which kills within minutes after contact with the skin. Still to be destroyed is almost 500,000 gallons of another nerve agent called GB, which will require equipment not yet installed, the spokesman said.

Road Extension Change Sought

A small group of residents from Brodick Crescent asked Saanich municipal planning committee Tuesday night to shift the planned extension of Feltham Road further south from the intended route west of Cedar Hill.

The committee after listening to the residents decided to refer the extension back to the engineering department for study.

J. S. Hayward, 1563 Brodick Crescent, said the financial argument of the municipality as to the route of the extension stood but he did not wish to have cars racing by his back door.

Murray Galbraith, 1565 Brodick Crescent, agreed that the intended route was the cheapest but felt "we are being penalized for what the municipality is going to save."

Saanich planner Tom Loney said the municipality is looking at the extention on a 10-year basis and added that the route could be designed and the cost difference compared to the present plan.

School Dog Passes, Gets Report Card

TORONTO (CP) — A plump, black mongrel named Hobo has passed his first year at school and has the report card to prove it.

The card said Hobo is "Co-operative, obedient, gentle, entertaining and by no means a slow learner."

The dog is the family pet of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Olch and their son, Roger. Hobo spent a lot of time away from home in the last few months and the Olchs wondered where he was.

They found out he was attending Sunny View School for crippled children. He came home one day with a note pinned to his collar saying:

"The boys and girls of Sunny View School would like Hobo's owner to know how much they enjoy Hobo's visits to their room."

Monday, the family learned that Hobo has been promoted to primary level for September. Mrs. Olch got a report card in the mail from teacher Mrs. E. B. Hunniset.

But the teacher wasn't entirely pleased with Hobo's performance:

"A slight irregularity in attendance is our only problem."

A Good Day Even Without A Gooey-Duck

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Sunday morning the tide was low around the Comox Peninsula. At Kye Bay, where Hazel Sabine and I were staying you could walk a mile out on the sandbar, with an occasional detour around a sea pool left when the waves receded.

Forbes

A perfect day for oystering, Doug Handel said. He'd take us if we'd like to go.

Soon three carloads of amateur oyster pickers were on their way to Point Holmes. We had shovels to dig for clams, buckets and pails for the oysters and a selection of amazingly sharp knives to get the things out of their shells.

The Point Holmes oyster beds are natural ones. They seeded themselves from cultivated beds farther south at Mud Bay and Fanny Bay.

Storms brought the seed to the Comox Peninsula. Conditions were right. The oysters grew and multiplied. Today, they are there by the hundreds.

★ ★ ★

Our cars were left at the top of a bluff overlooking the beach. Then, single file and carrying the various buckets, pails and shovels, we set off along a narrow dirt path to a point a mile away.

Here there was no wide sandbar as at Kye Bay. The beach is made of coarser stuff. Grittier. It extends only a few yards. Then comes an expanse of seaweed covered rocks about the size of baseballs or a little bigger.

It was among these rocks that we found the oysters. So well camoflaged in many instances that an amateur oyster hunter like myself had to look twice or three times to distinguish them from the rocks.

Once we were at the point, we were on our own. Some filled the oyster buckets. Others did the shucking. One or two struck out for a small bit of smooth sand beyond the rocks to look for clams. Big ones or little ones.

★ ★ ★

They did raise a gooey-duck (a monster clam with a long, strong neck) and spent well over an hour trying to get the thing up on top of the sand. He, she or it, kept burrowing deeper and deeper. Hanging on tighter and tighter with that long, suction neck. Finally the diggers gave up.

I'm afraid I cannot lay claim to either a basket with oysters or digging up a gooey-duck. I was lazy.

The sky was an arc of blue. Not even a wisp of cloud. Off at the right was the snow-etched line of Vancouver Island's Beaufort range of Mountains. Far on the left, the peaks of the Coast range showed clearly on the mainland, with a tiny mist of smoke to mark Powell River.

Hornby Island was only a stone's throw away. Denman and Tree a little further down the coast.

There was no wind. At the waterline there was no movement of waves. The sun was hot.

★ ★ ★

I did pick up a few oysters. Ones with round, fat looking shells and with good, deep under sides. And I did have a lesson in shucking.

My teacher sat on a rock with the pail of oysters on one side and a pail of sea water on the other.

"You take the knife like this . . . push it in about here . . . cut this little muscle up on the top . . . give the hinge a bit of a nip and . . . there you are . . . it opens just like that."

He demonstrated over and over again. Every time the shell opened and a big fat oyster was waiting to be scooped into the pail of water "after you nip this other muscle on the underside . . . see."

Somehow it was too complicated a procedure for me. Either that or the oysters I chose were smart enough to know I was an amateur amateur. They just wouldn't open.

Finally, when the sky was reaching high noon, we packed it up and trudged back over the narrow path between rows of wild roses and sweet brier.

Birds twittered sleepily somewhere deep in those bushes. There was no other sound except our own voices and the soft pad of our feet in the soft sand of the path.

As Doug Handel had said, it was a good day for oystering. A good day to be lazy, too. And certainly a good day to remember.

'An Age-Old Drive to Dominate Their Neighbors'

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG — Though newspaper headlines invariably depict Asian events in ideological terms, the turbulence currently nagging the Far East stems largely from tribal, religious, racial and regional causes that have deep historical roots.

In other words, the struggles between communism and anti-communism going on throughout Asia are more often than not the manifestation of traditional conflicts that belong to the realm of anthropology rather than political science.

The most obvious example of this atavism is now evident in Indochina, where the Vietnamese are reenacting their age-old drive to dominate their less dynamic neighbors.

Nothing illustrates this more vividly than the attitudes displayed by the Saigon Vietnamese and the Hanoi Vietnamese towards Cambodia and Laos.

South Vietnam's President Nguyen van Thieu has made it clear that his mission is to "protect" the unfortunate Cambodians — the implication being, of course, that he regards Cambodia as a potential Saigon satellite.

The North Vietnamese similarly feel that their destiny is to control Cambodia and Laos along with Vietnam. After all, their political movement was originally called the "Indochinese Communist Party" when it was founded in 1931.

That the Cambodians and Laotians are ultra-sensitive to Vietnamese ambitions has been underscored time and again in their public and private statements.

In an interview with this reporter a few years ago, for instance, the king of Laos dwelt at length on his fears of a Vietnamese invasion from the East. Significantly, he referred to the Vietnamese as "Annamites."

Prince Sihanouk, the former Cambodian chief of state, shared the same fears. Indeed, a member of his present government-in-exile once explained: "I hope the Vietnam war continues until the Vietnamese on both sides kill each other off."

Seen in this perspective, then, the confrontation in Indochina at the moment is less a fight between totalitarianism and freedom than a collision between rival Vietnamese factions for hegemony over the entire peninsula.

The Thais, who have long-standing designs on parts of Cambodia adjoining their borders, are also getting into the Indochina fray with the apparent intention of asserting ancient claims.

Other developments in Southeast Asia within recent years have also pointed up the extent to which present-day phenomena are actually revivals of tensions that reach back to the dim recesses of antiquity.

The massacres that swept across the Indonesian archipelago in 1965 and 1966 basically reflected complex local religious and clan feuds that bore only scant relation to the abortive communist coup d'etat that served to ignite that holocaust.

Ethnic stresses and strains underlie the troubles in countries as different as Malaysia and Burma and, as was revealed during Mao Tse-tung's tumultuous cultural revoltion, old family vendettas and regional frictions are still rife in China.

In large measure, the instability is symptomatic of the fact that many Asian lands have not yet attained nationhood and are constantly challenged by the threat of fragmentation.

The more energetic nationalists consider their national boundaries to be those circumscribed by the colonial powers that formerly ruled their areas. Thus the Vietnamese have staked out what used to be French Indochina while the Javanese have taken over all the territory once known as the Dutch East Indies.

Since the Second World War, when the process of decolonization began, the West has tried to guide the countries of Southeast Asia along the path of national development.

But western involvement in this part of the world rapidly became entangled in the cold war, with the result that the nationalist trend was distorted to conform to geopolitical labels concocted in Washington, Moscow and other capitals.

At present, however, it is plain that western attempts to manage Asia have been only marginally effective. For, as Kipling suggested a long time ago, taking up the "white man's burden" in the Orient is very much an exercise in futility.

The turmoil now shaking the region, therefore, is bound to persist as Asians seek to settle their own problems in their own way — which is the only way that these problems can be plausibly resolved.

A Collision Of 'Disasters'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Standing along with the Canadian Labor Congress and the Prices and Incomes Commission are the personalities who lead and symbolize them, Donald MacDonald and John Young.

It is crystal clear after last week's happenings that Donald MacDonald has a bitter concept, bordering on hate, for PIC and all its works ("a servile agency of the Government").

●

It is just as clear that the grinning Dr. Young tends to become the grimacing Young when organized labor enters his stream-of-mouth. He radiates a patronizing distaste for labor's negative and "stupid" resistance to his reasoning.

It's worth examining the question whether this standoff, so crippling to any achievement of voluntary controls in the economy, is solely on issues, or is an unfortunate matching of conflicting personalities at the root of much or all of the impasse. You can't go into the answer without jettisoning any "nice Nellie" neutrality.

Over the past year of observing Dr. Young and a longer period of following Donald MacDonald's leadership of the CLC, I've reached some firm opinions about each man. In shortest compass, I believe Young is a disaster and MacDonald another, though the extenuating circumstances are kinder.

●

The first point to make about Dr. John Young is that he has never been a great economist. His list of published works is very short and the impact of his work very slight.

Nor was he known in academic circles as a great teacher, who in the quiet of the university trained and equipped disciples for a major role in society.

Dr. Young had flirted with the Federal Liberals in the mid-60s over a possible candidacy. One present cabinet minister says that Young would have been into politics if some assurance had been forthcoming from Lester Pearson that his talents would be recognized immediately with a cabinet portfolio.

In sum, the Young picture: An aggressive, very confident man getting on in years without the equipment to be a seminal mind in his field and located just below the top in the frenetic whirl of university administration and politics in Wacky Bennett's B.C.

He takes the opportunity, starting from scratch an organization which is somehow independent of the government but not so independent or at arms-length as the Economic Council.

●

His associate cast was filled with: One "failed" politician, Gerin Lajoie, the token French-Canadian every Federal agency has to have; one "failed" civil servant, George Haythorne, who had run out of reputation except as a decent, kind man in the Department of Labor; and two relatively unknown and quiet workers in the bowels of bureaucracy, George Freeman and Bert Barrow, each of whom seems to have more credibility (from what I can gather) as economists than the other three commissioners.

Dr. Young was in a hurry to get into action.

He began to prod and prod. Further, he kept bringing up the subject of guidelines and voluntary controls, giving the impression that it would be easy for labor leaders to cooperate and if they didn't they were bad citizens.

●

My point is that Dr. Young decided immediately he took the job that he must play the organ publicly, loudly and often. Further, he took the limelight to himself, the other commissioners becoming backroom boys.

This could be a wise decision if the top man were a persuasive, attractive personality. When he isn't even fair at the game, it means there is no alternative to draw fire or to warm people — say as Harry Boyle has assisted Pierre Juneau with the CRTC.

If Dr. Young lacks tact and the ability to keep a silence while negotiations are under way, Donald MacDonald compounds the assurance of dissension by a remote, embattled, defensively-minded character. His capacity for warmth and enthusiasm and graciousness is low.

●

Frankly, the CLC is not capable of imaginative policies nor any flexibility in presenting a more appealing fact to the public or casting forth rebuttals with wit and irony, the kind of satirical jollying which would be most effective in deflating the simplified economic evangelism of Dr. Young and PIC.

What better illustration of a dearth of imagination and flexibility than the CLC's call for a mammoth national conference? Ugh!

MARIJUANA AND THE GIs

Taking Their Minds Off the War

By IAN WRIGHT
Manchester Guardian

"In this place," said the soldier with a grin, "you can blow your mind every night of the year."

In the language of the marijuana subculture familiar to most Americans under 30 but sadly baffling to most of the rest, the young soldier was saying that here in Vietnam cannabis, pot, the weed, giggle-smoke, grass, Mary Jane, call it what you will, is readily available and freely used.

This does not mean, as obscure Congressmen sometimes assert, that half the Army is permanently stoned or that the war is turning America's youth into drug addicts.

But as anyone who has spent time with the military knows, very many soldiers under 25, particularly those doing the fighting, use marijuana to relax and take their minds off the war.

Largely because smoking pot is illegal there has been a marked absence of good statistics. Undoubtedly the Army has played it down, saying, quite rightly, that most marijuana users picked up the habit before they came to Vietnam.

For some, pot is an antidote to fear. Since General Westmoreland's time most of the fighting has been done by small patrols, many of which can go for weeks without meeting the enemy, stumbling into an ambush, or kicking a booby trap. Then one day it happens. Your number comes up. Terror is in the unexpected.

Grunts (the expressive slang for an infantryman) on patrol tend not to use pot. Most of them have heard chilling stories of stoned soldiers who have blundered into deadly ambushes.

A young lieutenant confirmed this. "My platoon averages 23 men of whom maybe three did not use grass. Most of the fellows wouldn't allow anyone to smoke in the field. One soul brother did, but he was pretty unpopular."

An infantry captain who first came to Vietnam in 1967 told me: "In the field we had no problem. What I mean is I never noticed that any of my guys were stoned. It did not get in the way of what they had to do. I'm neutral as far as pot is concerned. You can have just as much trouble from alcohol."

But if there is a self-imposed prohibition in the field (and this varies from unit to unit), when troops return to their forward fire support bases the goof-butts light up.

These camps, often no more than clearings blasted out of the jungle to accommodate heavy artillery pieces, are makeshift and frequently uncomfortable. There is always a good chance they will be attacked and their guns pound away deafeningly into the night. The patrols come in to rest.

"Usually," said the lieutenant, "there's no beer at a fire support base. Maybe the officers in their tents have a couple of shots of liquor to keep their spirits up. The guys in the dugouts listen to music, smoke grass, and get pleasantly high. You can't blame them."

Another officer said: "You're got to use your sense in Vietnam. You can't pounce on guys for small things, otherwise you'll have trouble on your hands."

Although a lot of marijuana is smoked under these conditions, more is probably consumed in the big divisional base camps. Companies come in from the field and smoke to relax: the soldiers who live in the base camps smoke through sheer boredom. Sometimes they are tempted to turn to drugs stronger than marijuana. Some do, but at the moment narcotics seem to be used only by a very small minority. "Most guys," said a young sergeant from Brooklyn, "are not that stupid."

At these divisional base camps potheads are most likely to come up against authority. This means "them" — the men over 30, career officers or senior NCO's, whom they call "lifers."

Because the American Army has been so inflated by draftees, and young college graduate officers, who are civilians only in the service for the minimum length of time, lifers are in the minority.

Now while alcohol has long been the accepted escape route for the military establishment, pot is considered dangerous.

The lifers, who are the establishment, tend to lump all drugs together (apart from alcohol), equate them with crime, and, theoretically at least, take up an attitude which, if taken to its logical conclusion, would fill every military jail in Vietnam many times over.

In fact the incidence of cases involving marijuana known to the authorities is absurdly low (two per thousand men in 1969) and the conviction rate lower still.

This suggests either that the command is turning a blind eye to the very open activities of many young soldiers or that it doesn't care to tangle with them.

As in other aspects of military discipline in this very hard and complicated war, there is a degree of sensible accommodation to which neither side cares to admit.

Procuring marijuana in Vietnam is easier than getting a drink in London. There is no closing time.

"In every camp in the country," an army doctor confided, "I bet you can get a joint within five minutes." The weed grows wild, the weed is cultivated; Vietnamese rarely use it but since the Americans arrived they have discovered a new cash crop.

With three harvests a year, the Mekong Delta is the marijuana bowl of Vietnam. Until police moved in to destroy crops, some farmers were giving up rice and turning to cannabis.

But destruction urged by the army and United States federal agents hardly touches the supply. "We call it Vietnam's cottage industry," one of the Americans in charge of drug suppression told me with a grin.

Across the street from where I am writing there is a cigarette stand. If you ask for Pall Mall—"the very strong ones"—you will get an expertly wrapped Pall Mall pack, "cellophane" and all. But inside, each cigarette will have had its tobacco taken out and finely manicured marijuana put in its place. It will cost little more than an ordinary packet of cigarettes in England.

Very sensibly the army puts most of its effort into education. Most units have admirable "amnesty programs." If a soldier feels he needs treatment—in some units even after he has been apprehended by the law—he can go to the surgeon or the chaplain without fear of charges or notes on his record.

A survey made by the surgeon of the 173 Airborne Brigade concluded by saying: "What we have seen clinically is a majority of rather incapable, frustrated, poorly educated, passive-aggressive personalities complicating the many problems they already have by becoming involved with the use of marijuana."

But another brigade surgeon showed the army's other face. "I regard the use of drugs as just another symptom," he said. "in Vietnam all there is for most people to do is what they don't want to do. I've no doubt that pot aggravates a man's existing psychotic problems."

Then he added as a parting shot: "But if I was five years younger I'd probably be smoking the stuff myself."

'...Hey, Skinny! Come for a Swim...'

By ART STOTT

The young towhead who visited us over the weekend has been enrolled in a competitive swimming club.

"It's not," her mother explained, "that we expect her to develop into an Olympic team member. But she can swim 25 metres reasonably well now. If at the end of the season she can swim 50 metres as well or better, that's a gain in her swimming."

★ ★ ★

Her debut was startling. The young miss lined up with others of her age on the starting line, engrossed in the sheer wonder of being allowed to race. The signal sounded and the group took off — all but the towhead. She was still gazing around, checking to see if her mother was watching and a bit bemused by the whole thing. Finally she realized the race was on, jumped in and came last. "But only," as her parent explained, "by the distance she lost at the start. She'll learn."

Her young brother, two years her junior, is still with the beginners. A boy with a vocabulary and excellent articulation, he talks as good a swim as anyone in his age group. It's only when he's in over his knees that the difference between word and deed is fully apparent.

Eventually he'll move off under his own power in the water and we'll all heave a sigh of relief.

We take it for granted that every child who is physically able — and some who are handicapped — can swim and has the opportunity to learn here. In the last 24 years, the school board has been providing courses for Grade 5 pupils and, according to the authorities, enjoys about a 90 per cent success record in teaching them to swim with varying proficiency.

In addition there are other arrangements made for public children's swimming groups as well as private. The picture has changed somewhat since the pioneering days of Capt. Ian St. Clair, who taught all-comers in a logged-around pool somewhere in Selkirk water.

★ ★ ★

In my childhood I enjoyed the tuition of Fred Harling at the Gorge. Others were learning under Ralph Alcock. Any of the swim clubs, the V.A.S.C., V.I.A.A., Elks and the Victoria Y would help most who asked. And during his career from junior Y leader to physical director, Archie McKinnon has launched thousands of youngsters into the element.

Today the development seems almost as natural as the transformation of the frog's eggs into tadpoles — and the way they do it now makes the process simple.

As a very small boy I remember far different techniques. Your parents decided you should learn to swim. So they took you to the beach, where the water was a few degrees above freezing. They'd wade out waist deep, and you, the kid, would be in up to your neck, shivering and yelling like murder. The parent would put a hand under your chin, tell you to kick like a frog and sweep your arms in normal breast stroke. You'd slip off the hand, swallow water and come up yelling harder. The parent, tired of the whole thing, would apply the silencer—holding you under just long enought to let you know your noise wasn't appreciated — and then lug you to shore, admitting you weren't ready yet. They they'd send you somewhere to learn to swim.

★ ★ ★

There were numerous teaching methods. Boys older than you and able to swim, sometimes just threw you into deep water. The practice was reprehensible, uninformed and dangerous. But I never heard of a kid drowning from being thrown in.

Then there was the water-wings stage, on inflatable floats that went under your arms and gradually lost their air — not very good and inclined to create a dependence. Or you could be dangled on a stout cord at the end of a pole, held just high enough to allow you to breathe, a bit wetly and in terror.

★ ★ ★

Now the methods are more uniform. Preferably in small groups, the children are taken into the water — warm water — up to their waists, encouraged to duck down and pick things off bottom, to familiarize themselves with water in the eyes and maybe in the ears. Then comes the jellyfish float to prove to them that a body with air in the lungs can stay at least partly on the surface. You learn your push-offs and glides after that and work in your crawl kick and arm action, learning to breathe in the later stages.

The teachers have made it simple, water-shyness is on the wane and, under good supervision, there's little excuse other than some of the more serious physical handicaps for not learning.

Eventually the child can join a competitive club, stand gazing around when the starter's gun goes off, and learn about that too. With summer here, it's pleasing to old floaters like me to find there are so many chances for the youngsters to become proficient. If they don't, they've no one to blame but themselves.

'An Age-Old Drive to Dominate Their Neighbors'

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG — Though newspaper headlines invariably depict Asian events in ideological terms, the turbulence currently nagging the Far East stems largely from tribal, religious, racial and regional causes that have deep historical roots.

In other words, the struggles between communism and anti-communism going on throughout Asia are more often than not the manifestation of traditional conflicts that belong to the realm of anthropology rather than political science.

The most obvious example of this atavism is now evident in Indochina, where the Vietnamese are reenacting their age-old drive to dominate their less dynamic neighbors.

Nothing illustrates this more vividly than the attitudes displayed by the Saigon Vietnamese and the Hanoi Vietnamese towards Cambodia and Laos.

South Vietnam's President Nguyen van Thieu has made it clear that his mission is to "protect" the unfortunate Cambodians — the implication being, of course, that he regards Cambodia as a potential Saigon satellite.

The North Vietnamese similarly feel that their destiny is to control Cambodia and Laos along with Vietnam. After all, their political movement was originally called the "Indochinese Communist Party" when it was founded in 1931.

That the Cambodians and Laotians are ultra-sensitive to Vietnamese ambitions has been underscored time and again in their public and private statements.

In an interview with this reporter a few years ago, for instance, the king of Laos dwelt at length on his fears of a Vietnamese invasion from the East. Significantly, he referred to the Vietnamese as "Annamites."

Prince Sihanouk, the former Cambodian chief of state, shared the same fears. Indeed, a member of his present government-in-exile once explained: "I hope the Vietnam war continues until the Vietnamese on both sides kill each other off."

Seen in this perspective, then, the confrontation in Indochina at the moment is less a fight between totalitarianism and freedom than a collision between rival Vietnamese factions for hegemony over the entire peninsula.

The Thais, who have long-standing designs on parts of Cambodia adjoining their borders, are also getting into the Indochina fray with the apparent intention of asserting ancient claims.

Other developments in Southeast Asia within recent years have also pointed up the extent to which present-day phenomena are actually revivals of tensions that reach back to the dim recesses of antiquity.

The massacres that swept across the Indonesian archipelago in 1965 and 1966 basically reflected complex local religious and clan feuds that bore only scant relation to the abortive communist coup d'etat that served to ignite that holocaust.

Ethnic stresses and strains underlie the troubles in countries as different as Malaysia and Burma and, as was revealed during Mao Tse-tung's tumultuous cultural revoltion, old family vendettas and regional frictions are still rife in China.

In large measure, the instability is symptomatic of the fact that many Asian lands have not yet attained nationhood and are constantly challenged by the threat of fragmentation.

The more energetic nationalists consider their national boundaries to be those circumscribed by the colonial powers that formerly ruled their areas. Thus the Vietnamese have staked out what used to be French Indochina while the Javanese have taken over all the territory once known as the Dutch East Indies.

Since the Second World War, when the process of decolonization began, the West has tried to guide the countries of Southeast Asia along the path of national development.

But western involvement in this part of the world rapidly became entangled in the cold war, with the result that the nationalist trend was distorted to conform to geopolitical labels concocted in Washington, Moscow and other capitals.

At present, however, it is plain that western attempts to manage Asia have been only marginally effective. For, as Kipling suggested a long time ago, taking up the "white man's burden" in the Orient is very much an exercise in futility.

The turmoil now shaking the region, therefore, is bound to persist as Asians seek to settle their own problems in their own way — which is the only way that these problems can be plausibly resolved.

A Collision Of 'Disasters'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

Standing along with the Canadian Labor Congress and the Prices and Incomes Commission are the personalities who lead and symbolize them, Donald MacDonald and John Young.

It is crystal clear after last week's happenings that Donald MacDonald has a bitter concept, bordering on hate, for PIC and all its works ("a servile agency of the Government").

●

It is just as clear that the grinning Dr. Young tends to become the grimacing Young when organized labor enters his stream-of-mouth. He radiates a patronizing distaste for labor's negative and "stupid" resistance to his reasoning.

It's worth examining the question whether this standoff, so crippling to any achievement of voluntary controls in the economy, is solely on issues, or is an unfortunate matching of conflicting personalities at the root of much or all of the impasse. You can't go into the answer without jettisoning any "nice Nellie" neutrality.

Over the past year of observing Dr. Young and a longer period of following Donald MacDonald's leadership of the CLC, I've reached some firm opinions about each man. In shortest compass, I believe Young is a disaster and MacDonald another, though the extenuating circumstances are kinder.

●

The first point to make about Dr. John Young is that he has never been a great economist. His list of published works is very short and the impact of his work very slight.

Nor was he known in academic circles as a great teacher, who in the quiet of the university trained and equipped disciples for a major role in society.

Dr. Young had flirted with the Federal Liberals in the mid-60s over a possible candidacy. One present cabinet minister says that Young would have been into politics if some assurance had been forthcoming from Lester Pearson that his talents would be recognized immediately with a cabinet portfolio.

In sum, the Young picture: An aggressive, very confident man getting on in years without the equipment to be a seminal mind in his field and located just below the top in the frenetic whirl of university administration and politics in Wacky Bennett's B.C.

He takes the opportunity, starting from scratch an organization which is somehow independent of the government but not so independent or at arms-length as the Economic Council.

●

His associate cast was filled with: One "failed" politician, Gerin Lajoie, the token French-Canadian every Federal agency has to have; one "failed" civil servant, George Haythorne, who had run out of reputation except as a decent, kind man in the Department of Labor; and two relatively unknown and quiet workers in the bowels of bureaucracy, George Freeman and Bert Barrow, each of whom seems to have more credibility (from what I can gather) as economists than the other three commissioners.

Dr. Young was in a hurry to get into action.

He began to prod and prod. Further, he kept bringing up the subject of guidelines and voluntary controls, giving the impression that it would be easy for labor leaders to cooperate and if they didn't they were bad citizens.

●

My point is that Dr. Young decided immediately he took the job that he must play the organ publicly, loudly and often. Further, he took the limelight to himself, the other commissioners becoming backroom boys.

This could be a wise decision if the top man were a persuasive, attractive personality. When he isn't even fair at the game, it means there is no alternative to draw fire or to warm people — say as Harry Boyle has assisted Pierre Juneau with the CRTC.

YOUNG

MacDONALD

If Dr. Young lacks tact and the ability to keep a silence while negotiations are under way, Donald MacDonald compounds the assurance of dissension by a remote, embattled, defensively-minded character. His capacity for warmth and enthusiasm and graciousness is low.

●

Frankly, the CLC is not capable of imaginative policies nor any flexibility in presenting a more appealing fact to the public or casting forth rebuttals with wit and irony, the kind of satirical jollying which would be most effective in deflating the simplified economic evangelism of Dr. Young and PIC.

What better illustration of a dearth of imagination and flexibility than the CLC's call for a mammoth national conference? Ugh!

MARIJUANA AND THE GIs

Taking Their Minds Off the War

By IAN WRIGHT
Manchester Guardian

"In this place," said the soldier with a grin, "you can blow your mind every night of the year."

In the language of the marijuana subculture familiar to most Americans under 30 but sadly baffling to most of the rest, the young soldier was saying that here in Vietnam cannabis, pot, the weed, giggle-smoke, grass, Mary Jane, call it what you will, is readily available and freely used.

This does not mean, as obscure Congressmen sometimes assert, that half the Army is permanently stoned or that the war is turning America's youth into drug addicts.

But as anyone who has spent time with the military knows, very many soldiers under 25, particularly those doing the fighting, use marijuana to relax and take their minds off the war.

Largely because smoking pot is illegal there has been a marked absence of good statistics. Undoubtedly the Army has played it down, saying, quite rightly, that most marijuana users picked up the habit before they came to Vietnam.

For some, pot is an antidote to fear. Since General Westmoreland's time most of the fighting has been done by small patrols, many of which can go for weeks without meeting the enemy, stumbling into an ambush, or kicking a booby trap. Then one day it happens. Your number comes up. Terror is in the unexpected.

Grunts (the expressive slang for an infantryman) on patrol tend not to use pot. Most of them have heard chilling stories of stoned soldiers who have blundered into deadly ambushes.

A young lieutenant confirmed this. "My platoon averages 23 men of whom maybe three did not use grass. Most of the fellows wouldn't allow anyone to smoke in the field. One soul brother did, but he was pretty unpopular."

An infantry captain who first came to Vietnam in 1967 told me: "In the field we had no problem. What I mean is I never noticed that any of my guys were stoned. It did not get in the way of what they had to do. I'm neutral as far as pot is concerned. You can have just as much trouble from alcohol."

But if there is a self-imposed prohibition in the field (and this varies from unit to unit), when troops return to their forward fire support bases the goof-butts light up.

These camps, often no more than clearings blasted out of the jungle to accommodate heavy artillery pieces, are makeshift and frequently uncomfortable. There is always a good chance they will be attacked and their guns pound away deafeningly into the night. The patrols come in to rest.

"Usually," said the lieutenant, "there's no beer at a fire support base. Maybe the officers in their tents have a couple of shots of liquor to keep their spirits up. The guys in the dugouts listen to music, smoke grass, and get pleasantly high. You can't blame them."

Another officer said: "You're got to use your sense in Vietnam. You can't pounce on guys for small things, otherwise you'll have trouble on your hands."

Although a lot of marijuana is smoked under these conditions, more is probably consumed in the big divisional base camps. Companies come in from the field and smoke to relax: the soldiers who live in the base camps smoke through sheer boredom. Sometimes they are tempted to turn to drugs stronger than marijuana. Some do, but at the moment narcotics seem to be used only by a very small minority. "Most guys," said a young sergeant from Brooklyn, "are not that stupid."

At these divisional base camps potheads are most likely to come up against authority. This means "them" — the men over 30, career officers or senior NCO's, whom they call "lifers."

Because the American Army has been so inflated by draftees, and young college graduate officers, who are civilians only in the service for the minimum length of time, lifers are in the minority.

Now while alcohol has long been the accepted escape route for the military establishment, pot is considered dangerous.

The lifers, who are the establishment, tend to lump all drugs together (apart from alcohol), equate them with crime, and, theoretically at least, take up an attitude which, if taken to its logical conclusion, would fill every military jail in Vietnam many times over.

In fact the incidence of cases involving marijuana known to the authorities is absurdly low (two per thousand men in 1969) and the conviction rate lower still.

This suggests either that the command is turning a blind eye to the very open activities of many young soldiers or that it doesn't care to tangle with them.

As in other aspects of military discipline in this very hard and complicated war, there is a degree of sensible accommodation to which neither side cares to admit.

Procuring marijuana in Vietnam is easier than getting a drink in London. There is no closing time.

"In every camp in the country," an army doctor confided, "I bet you can get a joint within five minutes." The weed grows wild, the weed is cultivated; Vietnamese rarely use it but since the Americans arrived they have discovered a new cash crop.

With three harvests a year, the Mekong Delta is the marijuana bowl of Vietnam. Until police moved in to destroy crops, some farmers were giving up rice and turning to cannabis.

But destruction urged by the army and United States federal agents hardly touches the supply. "We call it Vietnam's cottage industry," one of the Americans in charge of drug suppression told me with a grin.

Across the street from where I am writing there is a cigarette stand. If you ask for Pall Mall—"the very strong ones"—you will get an expertly wrapped Pall Mall pack, "cellophane" and all. But inside, each cigarette will have had its tobacco taken out and finely manicured marijuana put in its place. It will cost little more than an ordinary packet of cigarettes in England.

Very sensibly the army puts most of its effort into education. Most units have admirable "amnesty programs." If a soldier feels he needs treatment—in some units even after he has been apprehended by the law—he can go to the surgeon or the chaplain without fear of charges or notes on his record.

A survey made by the surgeon of the 173 Airborne Brigade concluded by saying: "What we have seen clinically is a majority of rather incapable, frustrated, poorly educated, passive-aggressive personalities complicating the many problems they already have by becoming involved with the use of marijuana."

But another brigade surgeon showed the army's other face. "I regard the use of drugs as just another symptom," he said. "in Vietnam all there is for most people to do is what they don't want to do. I've no doubt that pot aggravates a man's existing psychotic problems."

Then he added as a parting shot: "But if I was five years younger I'd probably be smoking the stuff myself."

'...Hey, Skinny! Come for a Swim...'

By ART STOTT

The young towhead who visited us over the weekend has been enrolled in a competitive swimming club.

"It's not," her mother explained, "that we expect her to develop into an Olympic team member. But she can swim 25 metres reasonably well now. If at the end of the season she can swim 50 metres as well or better, that's a gain in her swimming."

★ ★ ★

Her debut was startling. The young miss lined up with others of her age on the starting line, engrossed in the sheer wonder of being allowed to race. The signal sounded and the group took off — all but the towhead. She was still gazing around, checking to see if her mother was watching and a bit bemused by the whole thing. Finally she realized the race was on, jumped in and came last. "But only," as her parent explained, "by the distance she lost at the start. She'll learn."

Her young brother, two years her junior, is still with the beginners. A boy with a vocabulary and excellent articulation, he talks as good a swim as anyone in his age group. It's only when he's in over his knees that the difference between word and deed is fully apparent.

Eventually he'll move off under his own power in the water and we'll all heave a sigh of relief.

We take it for granted that every child who is physically able — and some who are handicapped — can swim and has the opportunity to learn here. In the last 24 years, the school board has been providing courses for Grade 5 pupils and, according to the authorities, enjoys about a 90 per cent success record in teaching them to swim with varying proficiency.

In addition there are other arrangements made for public children's swimming groups as well as private. The picture has changed somewhat since the pioneering days of Capt. Ian St. Clair, who taught all-comers in a logged-around pool somewhere in Selkirk water.

★ ★ ★

In my childhood I enjoyed the tuition of Fred Harling at the Gorge. Others were learning under Ralph Alcock. Any of the swim clubs, the V.A.S.C., V.I.A.A., Elks and the Victoria Y would help most who asked. And during his career from junior Y leader to physical director, Archie McKinnon has launched thousands of youngsters into the element.

Today the development seems almost as natural as the transformation of the frog's eggs into tadpoles — and the way they do it now makes the process simple.

As a very small boy I remember far different techniques. Your parents decided you should learn to swim. So they took you to the beach, where the water was a few degrees above freezing. They'd wade out waist deep, and you, the kid, would be in up to your neck, shivering and yelling like murder. The parent would put a hand under your chin, tell you to kick like a frog and sweep your arms in normal breast stroke. You'd slip off the hand, swallow water and come up yelling harder. The parent, tired of the whole thing, would apply the silencer—holding you under just long enought to let you know your noise wasn't appreciated — and then lug you to shore, admitting you weren't ready yet. They they'd send you somewhere to learn to swim.

★ ★ ★

There were numerous teaching methods. Boys older than you and able to swim, sometimes just threw you into deep water. The practice was reprehensible, uninformed and dangerous. But I never heard of a kid drowning from being thrown in.

Then there was the water-wings stage, on inflatable floats that went under your arms and gradually lost their air — not very good and inclined to create a dependence. 'QUIET LOSERS IN GAME OF LIFE'

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — A plea to bring 750,000 youngsters back into the mainstream of life has been issued by a private commission after a 3½-year study of emotional and learning disorders among Canadian children.

The fact-packed volume also unleashed scathing criticism of current aid programs, which it said leave many such children "quiet losers in the game of life."

The present system of schools and aid programs are a hodgepodge of overlapping jurisdictions and cross purposes, complicated by petty professional jealousies, it says.

The study says 1,000,000 Canadian children up to age 19 are affected by emotional and learning disorders and only a quarter of them are getting adequate treatment.

"In any other field a problem of this magnitude would be heralded as an acute epidemic or a national disaster."

Commissioned by seven welfare, health and educational organizations, the study makes a strong pitch for public support.

RARELY DRAMATIC

"The children we are concerned about are rarely dramatic—they don't have much public appeal until you understand their problems and the frustration and anger of their parents in their search for help.

"These children suffer from varying degrees of emotional crippling. Some are retarded, some are mentally handicapped.

"Almost all have problems in learning and gradually fall farther and farther behind in school until they fail or are forced to drop out. They are often the quiet losers in the game of life."

It calls for a halt to the system of dividing these youngsters "into pieces," with teachers trying to teach them and doctors trying to make them healthy.

It says this procedure may compound the problems by cutting a child off from his family and friends. "Frequently, by the way we handle him, we make him even more different."

Each child should be treated in a way that would enhance his personal dignity.

GROUPS JOINED FORCES

The commission was set up by the Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded, the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, the Canadian Education Association, the Canadian Mental Health Association, the Canadian Rehabilitation Council for the Disabled, the Canadian Welfare Council and Dr. Barnardo's, a British-based organization that has studied children in many countries.

R. H. Shannon headed the 11-member commission which created a study committee under Dr. Charles A. Roberts, head of the psychiatry department at the University of Ottawa, and Dr. Denis Lazure, executive director of Riviere-des-Prairies Hospital in Montreal.

The study was released at a news conference Tuesday.

It stresses the point that, as far as possible, the child's connections with his family and his school companions should be maintained.

It cites instances where, in order to get publicly-financed help for a disturbed child, families have first had to make their child a public ward.

"We saw families falling apart when a little temporary help and support to relieve the strain could have maintained a home base for the child."

TEACHERS HAMPERED

Because of a fragmented approach, teachers working with disturbed children have been denied medical information about their students because they were not considered part of the "medical team," the report said.

This kind of professional jealousy should be replaced by effort "to support the school and to reinforce the positive contribution that the classroom teacher can make to the development of the child."

Overworked professionals — doctors, nurses, teachers — should be helped by lay assistants, it said.

Nursery, kindergarten, preschool and day care programs should be expanded, and priority for attendance should be given to children who are handicapped physically, socially or educationally.

The educational grading system should be revised, permitting the student to progress through the system at his own speed. Needs, interests and abilities of children should be determining factors in their studies, rather than mastery of a set quota of specific knowledge.

SUGGESTS LOCAL UNITS

The country should be divided into population units ranging in size from 25,000 to 50,000 persons. For each such unit, there would be a community board to promote, plan and run a co-ordinated network of personal care services.

Voting by Proxy Approved by House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Tuesday cleared one of the last hurdles to giving thousands of Canadians the opportunity to vote through a proxy system.

MPs limited the right to prospectors, mariners, fishermen, students and the handicapped and ill. They turned down a proposal that would have included workers in airlines, buses, railways and trucking who work away from their riding on election day.

The decision on proxy voting came during debate at the committee stage—the step before third reading—of a bill to amend the Canada Elections Act.

The bill would lower the minimum voting age to 18 from 21 and extend voting rights to federal public servants abroad.

The Commons does not sit today, St. Jean Baptiste Day.

RISK IMPERSONATION

A government proposal that the proxy vote be given to such persons as prospectors, students and the ill was approved after the House defeated an amendment by Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) that would have extended the scheme to include transport workers.

Privy Council President Donald Macdonald said he had previously favored giving the proxy to other occupations. But he had decided it should be limited because of the problem of controlling impersonation.

Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast Chilcotin) said he had wanted the right of proxy extended to loggers but decided it "would not be very workable."

The Commons also approved an amendment that would reduce to 50 from 75 the number of electoral candidates a new group must field to be recognized officially as a party.

A party of 12 members in the Commons is automatically recognized.

The amendment by Grant Deachman (L—Vancouver Quadra) was quickly supported by Mr. Macdonald.

REQUIRE DEPOSIT

The Commons defeated 26 to 5 an amendment by Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) that would have wiped out the requirement that a candidate submit a deposit of $200 with his nomination papers.

Mr. Rowland said a candidate should not have to suffer for participating in an election. Under the legislation he would lose his deposit if he did not gain one-half the total of votes cast for the winning candidate.

Lloyd Francis (L—Ottawa West) said frivolous candidates tend to enter elections, especially municipal elections where deposits are not required.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said there have been no frivolous candidates in British Columbia provincial elections for years. Candidates had to get 50 signatures in order to run in B.C.

NEED VOTERS' NAMES

Yves Forest, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Macdonald, assured Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbiniere) that candidates would be able to learn the names of servicemen and public servants qualified to vote in their ridings.

Mr. Fortin said his party had unhappy experiences with the forces vote in past elections.

An amendment by Mr. Howard that would have extended the closing time for polls to 8 p.m. from 7 p.m. was voted down 32 to 13 even though Mr. Macdonald said he was "talked into it" by the New Democratic MP.

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste—Abitibi) proposed that electors be required to present an identification card at the poll to get a ballot. His proposal, an amendment, was defeated 37 to four.

WOMAN NAMES JAIL OF HER OWN CHOICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Freida McLaughlin, 51, Tuesday asked Provincial Court Judge J. J. Anderson for a sentence of more than two years so she could spend her time in Kingston Penitentiary.

"All my friends and relatives are there," she said after pleading guilty to presenting worthless cheques totalling $203 to two local hotels.

When she appeared here she was already under a sentence of two years less a day for similar cheque charges in Port Alberni.

A sentence less than two years would mean she would do her time at the Oakalla provincial jail. Women sentenced to more than two years are sent to the Ontario prison.

Canadians 'In Flap' Over Drugs

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Gordon Bell, a specialist in drug and alcohol addiction, said Tuesday Canadians have "gone into a flap" over the growing use of drugs.

He told a conference of the Association of Halfway House Alcoholism Programs of North America that he does not want "to minimize the problem, but there are more solutions to it than we have been saying."

Most communities have more than enough resources to cope with their own social drug and alcohol problems, said.

Dr. Bell, director of Toronto, Donwood Foundation for the treatment of all forms of addiction, said: "You don't have to have a degree to be a competent therapist." Non-medical persons were as competent, and in some cases more competent, in giving counsel and reassurance to an addict.

He said three teams should be responsible for the treatment of an addict—a medical team, the addict's family and friends, and a trained non-clinical team which helps "set a new pattern of life" for the addict.

He stressed the importance of making an addict realize that a habitual tendency cannot be stopped with less than a year's treatment.

One Killed, Two Injured In Ottawa Bomb Blast

TRAPPED WORKERS are aided by rescuers hoisted to highway bridge in Kittery, Maine, where construction platform gave way today, spilling eleven men 95 feet to the ground. Several workers were able to hang onto bridgework until rescuers arrived. (AP Wirephoto.)

FOUR MEN DIE IN PLUNGE FROM BRIDGE

KITTERY, Maine (UPI) — Eleven men fell 95 feet to the ground today when a platform on which they were working collapsed on a highway bridge under construction. Four men were killed and seven were injured, three seriously.

The platform holding 15 workmen gave way at one end but three managed to grab girders and a fourth was snared in a rope until rescued.

The moveable platform was beneath the roadway of the $21 million bridge designed to carry Interstate 95 over the Piscataqua River which flows between Kittery and Portsmouth, N.H.

★ ★ ★

As the platform gave way, two workers grasped bridgework but lost their grip and plunged to the dirt below.

Firemen on aerial ladders rescued the three men trapped in the girders for more than one hour. The workman dangling from a rope was brought down by a rescue crew in a large crane.

Cause of the accident was not known.

John Shea, 23, an engineer-technician at Portsmouth naval shipyard, said he heard a "loud bang" and saw the platform tilt.

He said he saw six men clinging to the platform and one slipped off. He said that as he climbed a fence to offer aid, "I saw another man who was holding onto a girder slip off."

★ ★ ★

The workmen were removing planking beneath the bridge. The platform moved back and forth crosswise on two I-beams. The beams, he said, apparently sagged downward, tilting the platform and dumping out the workmen.

A fire official who helped resuce two of the men trapped in the girders said one was "very cool — he helped guide us to him." He said the second men was in a state of "semi-shock."

U.S. Senate Repeals Tonkin Resolution

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate voted today to repeal the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution, amid sharp debate over tactics being followed by Republican supporters of President Nixon's Southeast Asia policies.

This is the resolution which President Lyndon B. Johnson used as authority to escalate the war against North Vietnam. It was adopted following reports of an attack on American warships in the Gulf of Tonkin.

President Johnson later used the resolution to send more than 500,000 troops into South Vietnam.

4 Jailed At Bomb Hearing

MONTREAL (CP) — The special fire commissioner's inquiry into Montreal's recent wave of bombings adjourned indefinitely Tuesday night after two female witnesses were released from custody and four males were sent to jail for refusing to testify.

Commissioner Cyrille Delage suspended the hastily-called inquiry at the end of the second day's sitting. Further action would depend on Jerome Choquette, Quebec justice minister.

He liberated Maude Martin and Mrs. Andre Roy after they had testified and sentenced Andre Roy, 26, Pierre Carrier, 30, Claude Morency, 19, and Francois Lanctot, 21, to 15 days in jail for contempt when they would not answer questions.

Lawyer Robert Lemieux, representing all six young witnesses, said his male clients could be out of jail in 10 days with good behavior.

The inquiry was ordered Monday by Mr. Choquette to investigate 12 bombings in the Montreal area since May 24.

CAN ORDER ARREST

Under terms of the Fire Investigation Act passed by the Quebec national assembly in 1968, the commissioner can order the arrest without charges of any person he considers would not appear voluntarily at such an inquiry.

There are no accused and persons appearing are witnesses only but one article of the act states:

"A witness cannot refuse to answer for the reason that his reply might tend to incriminate him or to expose him to a proceeding of any kind; but his reply cannot be used against him in any subsequent criminal proceeding, except for perjury."

The inquiry was announced by Mr. Choquette in the wake of the arrest of six persons and the seizure of more than 350 pounds of dynamite in two weekend raids.

'Wrenching' Foreign Policy Changes Likely

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will table six white papers Thursday which will map Canada's future course in world affairs for the next decade.

The six papers — totalling a concise aggregate of only 200 pages — are the distillation of the most intensive and longest policy review by the Trudeau administration on any subject.

They are expected to propose some wrenching changes in Canada's traditional stance towards the outside world and, because of Canada's special role as a innovative and influential middle power, are likely to be given extremely close scrutiny throughout the capitals of the world not only for information on the specific Canadian plans but hints for general trends in the international climate.

The two-year-long studies, launched on orders of Prime Minister Trudeau within days of his assuming office will be summarized by a general statement of overall policy.

It will be followed up with specific papers covering five areas of special interest to the Trudeau government:

POLICE AND ARMY bomb experts survey damage of national defence headquarters building in downtown Ottawa today. A bomb, planted at the side of the temporary wooden building, ripped a hole and the force of the explosion killed one woman and injured two others working inside. Police say they have no suspects. (CP Wirephoto).

Defence Building Target of Raid

OTTAWA (CP) — A St. Jean Baptiste Day bomb blast rocked a national defence headquarters building early today, killing one woman and injuring two other persons.

Dead is Jeanne D'Arc St. Germain, 50, a communicator operator in the defence telecommunications centre.

Capt. H. B. Vallance, 33, was taken to military hospital with lacerations. Pte. G. I. Swaffield, 23, was treated at the medical unit at defence headquarters for shock and later released.

Defence department spokesmen said the bomb was placed in a long cement well just outside the room where Mrs. St. Germain and Pte. Swaffield were working.

The bomb, believed to have contained a large quantity of dynamite, blew up at 6:26 a.m., a minute after an anonymous caller telephoned a local radio station to say there would be an explosion.

WINDOWS BROKEN

The blast ricocheted back and forth across Lisgar Street, shattering windows in a two-block area around the building in the city's central area and blowing a large hole through the wall.

A public works department official said damage to the defence department building, a Second World War "temporary" frame structure on a concrete foundation, was more than $10,000.

More than 100 windows were broken and there was damage to electrical circuits. But the communications centre was operating.

NO LEADS

Ottawa police said they have no leads on possible suspects.

But occurence of the blast on the feast day of St. Jean Baptiste, patron saint of French Canada, and the target selected pointed to possible action by separatist or Quebec nationalist terrorists.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux issued a statement saying he was "shocked at the bombing outrage." He extended sympathy to the family of Mrs. St. Germain.

Cadieux said the building is regularly patrolled by armed forces security guards but the bomb apparently was planted between patrols.

"Additional security precautions have been put into effect," he said.

Telephone bomb threats later in the morning against the Chateau Laurier Hotel and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics proved false.

BARRICADE STREET

Police and firemen blocked off glass-littered Lisgar Street in front of the building while city police, the RCMP and armed forces investigators picked their way through the debris.

The blast, which blew out heavy chunks of the concrete foundation and peeled off the outside shingles to leave a hole 10 by 12 feet, came about 30 minutes before the guard changes at the main entrance to the building and an hour

SUNDAY DRINKING JULY 1

Sunday drinking with meals in licensed dining establishments will be legal in British Columbia July 1, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today.

Extended hours of sale to as late as 1 a.m. weekdays—were also announced as the provincial government instituted a number of recommended liquor law changes proposed by the Morrow commission on liquor in March.

Other changes allow women to serve drinks in all licensed premises, restrict pubs to serving one glass of beer at a time and make available colored photographic identification for 19-year-olds.

Sunday liquor with meals will be available between the hours noon and 10 p.m. No cabaret-type entertainment or dancing will be permitted on Sundays, Peterson said.

Rotating Postal Strikes Hit City, Four Provinces

Thousands of postal workers in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario walked off the job early today.

In Victoria, 320 members of the Letter Carriers Union and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers are on strike after walking out at 5:30 a.m. This is the second time Victoria workers have struck; the first was June 17.

Stan Darlington, Victoria branch president of the CUPW said this morning all major centres on Vancouver Island are shut down. He said the walkouts would last 24 hours.

STILL ON STRIKE

On the mainland, walkouts began in New Westminster and quickly spread to Prince Rupert, all centres in the Okanagan and Kootenays, many parts of the Fraser Valley including Mission, Surrey, Port Coquitlam and Delta.

About 800 workers remained on strike in Calgary. They left their jobs Tuesday, and a union official said they would not be back at work before 6 a.m. Thursday.

Another 800 workers in Edmonton struck this morning for the second time since the Council of Postal Unions began rotating strikes in early May. There is no indication how long the Edmonton walkout will continue.

Postal workers in Winnipeg, the first city to be hit by rotating strikes, were on strike today for the third time.

The Winnipeg strike involves about 1,100 workers and will last 48 hours.

In Ontario, 900 men are off the job in Ottawa, 500 in Hamilton; and workers in parts of the borough of North York and the towns of Port Credit, Mississauga, Milton, Oakville, Malton, Woodbridge, Thornhill, Richmond Hill, Clarkson, Streetsville, Markham, Pickering, Stouffville and Ajax are on strike.

Hamilton's workers had just

RAIDS SUPPORT GROUND ACTION

U.S. Escalates Cambodia Air War

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The Cambodian military command disclosed today that United States jet fighter-bombers, in an apparent major shift in U.S. policy, have attacked deep into Cambodia in direct support of Cambodian ground forces.

The announcement, which U.S. officials in Saigon would neither confirm nor deny, coincided with reports that North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units were marshalling east of Phnom Penh, and that heavy fighting had broken out again at Kompong Speu, 30 miles southwest of the Cambodian capital.

The U.S. air strikes helped break the month-long siege of Kompong Thom, a provincial capital 80 miles north of Phnom Penh, a Cambodian spokesman said. This extension of the American air war appeared to be a sign of recognition by the United States that without some assist from strong U.S. firepower, the Cambodian forces might crumple under the Communist command's growing pressure.

Maj. Am Rong, the Cambodian spokesman, said he could furnish no details on the exact location of attacks, the types of U.S. jets involved, the time they went into action or the results.

Eyewitness reports on Tuesday from Kompong Thom and Skoun, another endangered Cambodian town, said U.S. propellor-driven OV-10 aircraft had been marking targets for South Vietnamese jet fighter-bombers supporting Cambodian troops.

The U.S. command in Saigon, apparently under strict orders from the Pentagon, has refused repeatedly to discuss U.S. air activity in Cambodia other than to repeat the Pentagon's admission Monday that American pilots were flying up to 10 miles inside Cambodia to attack North Vietnamese and Viet Cong supply lines.

Komgpong Thom is 95 miles from the South Vietnamese border and well beyond the 21.7-mile limit set by President Nixon for U.S. ground forces in Cambodia.

Meanwhile, Cambodian troops began a sweep today about five miles east of Phnom Penh, where a North Vietnamese and Viet Cong force was reported marshalling, possibly for an attack with rockets and mortars on the capital.

It was the closest concentration of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces reported around the capital to date and tended to confirm intelligence reports that an attack could come at any time.

The Cambodian spokesman also reported that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops had surrounded the provincial capital of Kompong Speu, 30 miles west southwest of Phnom Penh, and that fighting for control of the town was heavy. He said the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong had launched repeated attacks agains the government defenders, but that the Cambodians apparently still held the town.

U.K. Faces Major Dock Strike Over Pay

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — Britain's new Conservative government has been confronted with its first major labor problem with the calling of a national dock strike for July 14.

The strike was called by the giant Transport and General Workers Union to back demands for an increase in the national minimum pay for longshoremen.

If it materializes, the strike would be the first official stoppage affecting the docks on a national scale since 1926.

The impact on Britain's economy, still shaky after the crisis of recent years, would be "absolutely catastrophic," an employers spokesman said.

About 90 per cent of all export and import tonnage passes through the seaports.

The union wants the national minimum pay rate increased to £20 ($50) from the present £11 ($27.50) paid the 47,000 longshoremen.

WON'T PAY IT

Bill Tonge, chairman of the National Association of Port Employers, said Tuesday night that members of the association are not prepared to pay the £20, because such extra expense would endanger modernization of docks in London and upset attempts to achieve a new wage structure for the industry.

Tim O'Leary, national docks secretary for the union, indicated he feels a strike is virtually inevitable. Barring any further developments, "this is the end of the road," O'Leary said.

Tonge maintained that with normal extra payments added to the national minimum, longshoremen in Britain now average £36 ($90) a week.

Robert Carr, employment and productivity minister in Prime Minister Heath's newly-installed cabinet, was not expected to try any early intervention. He discussed labor relations in general at a meeting with top officials of the country's union movement Tuesday and later with representatives of industry.

Vic Feather, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, said after the meeting the new government does not seem bent on any "precipitate" action aimed at a clampdown against organized labor.

But Percy Hanley, president of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, predicted a "bitter struggle" by labor to resist what he called management attempts to have government impose changes in the industrial relations field. These changes would be a way of compensating for the incompetent approach of employers to such problems, said Hanley.

TRUDEAU PLANS MOSCOW JUNKET

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau plans to carry his personal style of diplomacy to Moscow next fall, it was learned today.

It is understood he will confer with Premier Alexei Kosygin and other Soviet leaders on Soviet-Canadian affairs as well as on world issues.

Undoubtedly one of the subjects will be Canadian policy towards China.

NDP Asks Change In Abortion Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Two New Democrat MPs have written Prime Minister Trudeau that the party's 23 federal members "are willing to agree" to passage in one day of legislation repealing Criminal Code provisions on abortion.

In a letter dated June 19, Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood) and Grace MacInnis Vancouver - Kingsway urge Mr. Trudeau to "secure the opinion of other opposition parties as it is our view that this is a very urgent matter."

Mr. Trudeau said during a visit to Vancouver recently that he would agree to the repeal of abortion prohibitions if the opposition parties would agree to one-day passage before Friday, June 26. That's when the Commons is scheduled to adjourn for a summer recess, probably until early October.

The prime minister rejected the one-day passage suggestion in the Commons this week. Tuesday in the Commons, he made the same offer on long-promised legislation to establish a Canadian Development Corporation.

The one-day passage suggestion is a device Mr. Trudeau uses in argument with his opponents. Few seriously believe abortion legislation could possibly pass Parliament in a day.

When a bill amending the Criminal Code abortion section was presented at the last session of Parliament, passage took several weeks. The stiffest opposition came from the Creditistes.

The code now permits therapeutic abortions where a three-member hospital committee agrees.

Indochina Conference Chances 'Dim'

JAKARTA (AP) — Foreign Minister Adam Malik of Indonesia said today the prospects of holding an international conference on Indochina this year are dim and blamed China and North Vietnam.

"An international conference as desired by the Jakarta meeting is a long way off," he told reporters. "The key lies with Peking and Hanoi. As long as they do not want it the conference cannot be held."

Malik said the three-nation mission established by the Jakarta conference on Cambodia in May so far has not met Communist Chinese and North Vietnamese representatives in Paris.

Malik returned earlier this week from Moscow where he headed the three-nation mission, made up of Indonesia, Japan and Malaysia, in talks with Soviet leaders on the Indochina situation.

The mission was charged with attempting to rally support for an international meeting based on the 1954 Geneva accord on Indochina.

The mission is expected to hold talks in London later this week and will visit Warsaw, Ottawa and Washington.

U.K. Faces Major Dock Strike Over Pay

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — Britain's new Conservative government has been confronted with its first major labor problem with the calling of a national dock strike for July 14.

The strike was called by the giant Transport and General Workers Union to back demands for an increase in the national minimum pay for longshoremen.

If it materializes, the strike would be the first official stoppage affecting the docks on a national scale since 1926.

The impact on Britain's economy, still shaky after the crisis of recent years, would be "absolutely catastrophic," an employers spokesman said.

About 90 per cent of all export and import tonnage passes through the seaports.

The union wants the national minimum pay rate increased to £20 ($50) from the present £11 ($27.50) paid the 47,000 longshoremen.

WON'T PAY IT

Bill Tonge, chairman of the National Association of Port Employers, said Tuesday night that members of the association are not prepared to pay the £20, because such extra expense would endanger modernization of docks in London and upset attempts to achieve a new wage structure for the industry.

Tim O'Leary, national docks secretary for the union, indicated he feels a strike is virtually inevitable. Barring any further developments, "this is the end of the road," O'Leary said.

Tonge maintained that with normal extra payments added to the national minimum, longshoremen in Britain now average £36 ($90) a week.

Robert Carr, employment and productivity minister in Prime Minister Heath's newly-installed cabinet, was not expected to try any early intervention. He discussed labor relations in general at a meeting with top officials of the country's union movement Tuesday and later with representatives of industry.

Vic Feather, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, said after the meeting the new government does not seem bent on any "precipitate" action aimed at a clampdown against organized labor.

But Percy Hanley, president of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, predicted a "bitter struggle" by labor to resist what he called management attempts to have government impose changes in the industrial relations field. These changes would be a way of compensating for the incompetent approach of employers to such problems, said Hanley.

TRUDEAU PLANS MOSCOW JUNKET

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau plans to carry his personal style of diplomacy to Moscow next fall, it was learned today.

It is understood he will confer with Premier Alexei Kosygin and other Soviet leaders on Soviet-Canadian affairs as well as on world issues.

Undoubtedly one of the subjects will be Canadian policy towards China.

NDP Asks Change In Abortion Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Two New Democrat MPs have written Prime Minister Trudeau that the party's 23 federal members "are willing to agree" to passage in one day of legislation repealing Criminal Code provisions on abortion.

In a letter dated June 19, Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood) and Grace MacInnis Vancouver - Kingsway urge Mr. Trudeau to "secure the opinion of other opposition parties as it is our view that this is a very urgent matter."

Mr. Trudeau said during a visit to Vancouver recently that he would agree to the repeal of abortion prohibitions if the opposition parties would agree to one-day passage before Friday, June 26. That's when the Commons is scheduled to adjourn for a summer recess, probably until early October.

The prime minister rejected the one-day passage suggestion in the Commons this week. Tuesday in the Commons, he made the same offer on long-promised legislation to establish a Canadian Development Corporation.

The one-day passage suggestion is a device Mr. Trudeau uses in argument with his opponents. Few seriously believe abortion legislation could possibly pass Parliament in a day.

When a bill amending the Criminal Code abortion section was presented at the last session of Parliament, passage took several weeks. The stiffest opposition came from the Creditistes.

The code now permits therapeutic abortions where a three-member hospital committee agrees.

Indochina Conference Chances 'Dim'

JAKARTA (AP) — Foreign Minister Adam Malik of Indonesia said today the prospects of holding an international conference on Indochina this year are dim and blamed China and North Vietnam.

"An international conference as desired by the Jakarta meeting is a long way off," he told reporters. "The key lies with Peking and Hanoi. As long as they do not want it the conference cannot be held."

Malik said the three-nation mission established by the Jakarta conference on Cambodia in May so far has not met Communist Chinese and North Vietnamese representatives in Paris.

Malik returned earlier this week from Moscow where he headed the three-nation mission, made up of Indonesia, Japan and Malaysia, in talks with Soviet leaders on the Indochina situation.

The mission was charged with attempting to rally support for an international meeting based on the 1954 Geneva accord on Indochina.

The mission is expected to hold talks in London later this week and will visit Warsaw, Ottawa and Washington.

Having Faith In Nanoseconds

By Jack Scott

We have today several soothing words about what computers are doing with your life. First, let me assure you that your guide (me) is fairly bursting with fear and loathing of any piece of hardware that answers back.

Scott

I always feel like one of the passenger, as the old story goes, in the first totally automatic airliner. "This is your computer speaking," the voice comes from the flight deck. "We are flying today without a crew. Our flight is programmed for 38,000 feet at 680 miles per hour. The modern scientific miracle of the computer has made this possible with only you passengers aboard. Do not be alarmed, nothing can go wrong, can go wrong, can go wrong. . . ."

Two things, occuring all but simultaneously, sent me hippity-hopping to City Hall.

One: in the morning my wife had gone to the B.C. Telephone office to inquire about the charges on several long-distance calls not of our making.

"The computer made an error," said the little lady at the desk, cheerfully rfunding the money.

Two: In the afternoon a scientist from Washington appeared on the tube describing experiments to computerize the American war in Vietnam through the use of sensors which would relay information on enemy movements and instantly retaliate. "War will thus be brought to total sophistication," the scientist said.

★ ★ ★

Armageddon by instant computation, a transistorized monster that apparently can get all balled-up over some simple phone calls, had me feeling suddenly like a sparrow caught in a badminton game.

Frank Grealy was, as I say, soothing. A bushy-haired, calm man of 38 who has worked with computers for six years, which puts him in the covered wagon set of his profession, he's in charge of the city's data processing.

A huge window in his office looks inward on a gleaming IBM machine called the 360 Model 20. As we talked it was out there, moaning softly, analyzing crime statistics, compiling your property assessments and taxation, gliding through accounts payable, costing vehicle expenses and God knows what. Had it been plotting the overthrow of the western world it wouldn't have surprised me.

"First of all," said Grealy, oozing reassurance, "computers seldom, if ever, make mistakes. It's easy to pass the buck to them, but in our two years with the 360 I've yet to see it goof. It's only human error that causes it to go wrong. In the business we say 'garbage in, garbage out.' Why, computers even have the human capacity of shutting up if they're confused. We've tried to confound this one with impossible demands. It just sensibly clams up.

"As for its capacity for evil, as a weapon of war, for example, you come back to the same story. Man still controls his own destiny. The computer is just one of the tools he uses. Not a very reliable tool, either, in the case of war, because you can kill a computer cold stone dead just by pulling the plug. John Edward Pfeiffer, who looked into this, pointed out that you'd need to mobilize tens of thousands of computers for battle conditions, that they'd be prime targets and, more important, if just one was destroyed the result could be a chaotic informational traffic jam.

"But, you see, when you've worked with computers, when you accept that the human evolution is the evolution of machines, you tend to think only of the immense good they can do.

"Man won't lose his questioning nature. He'll just find the answers quicker. This computer's work, you see, is measured in nanoseconds. That's a billionth of a second! There are as many nanoseconds in one second as there are seconds in 30 years!

"What that means, in real terms, is that a scientist may accomplish in one day what would take a hundred years without the machine. When you think of what that's done and will do, how it will design better cities for the future, offer new dimensioons in education and medicine, bring the day when you can simply dial a central computer to find instant answers, then you just have to have faith."

Steadied by these encouraging words I rose to leave, then recalled the question I'd meant to ask about computers selecting ideal mates for matrimony.

"Would you want your daughter to marry a computer's choice?" I blurted.

Frank Geary pondered the question, looking not nearly as confident as he'd seemed. The 360 Model 20 moaned away. The nanoseconds were ominously ticking past.

"That," he said, taking me right back to square one, "I wouldn't recommend."

INDIAN CAUGHT IN VICIOUS CIRCLE

Get Off, Then We'll Get Up—Chief Paul

By GINNY GALT

Over the last century, Canada's larger society has beaten the Indian people to their knees, and now has the audacity to ask "why don't you get up?", Chief Phillip Paul said Tuesday.

Paul, chief of the Tsartlip tribe told the Kiwanis Club that Indian people have to muster their own courage and surmount difficulties.

●

"Things won't be handed to them on a silver platter. But at the same time there should be a better appreciation of the Indian people by the larger society," said Paul.

He said Indians are fighting against stereotype images. They're the last to be hired and the first to be fired. Individual attitudes have got to change.

"If the larger society won't treat the Indian people as equals, it will have to pay the welfare tab."

He said Indian people are trapped in a vicious circle of environment, the educational system, unemployment, and bureaucratic goings-on in the federal governments Indian Affairs branch which they don't understand.

"Indian children are educated away from their people. They're not afforded the opportunity to identify and accept themselves for what they are."

He said there's also the conflict in cultures. They are taught the material values of the larger society which are completely different from their own cultural values.

●

Paul works for the school board's adult education branch as a co-ordinator for the Indian program which he says is biased towards Indian culture and history.

He said that quite arbitrarily past governments had set up legislation based on paternalism which has usurped all dignity the Indian people had.

Paul, who is on the executive on the union of B.C. Indian Chiefs and B.C. representative to the National Indian Brotherhood, said he partook in the so-called advice and consultation sessions to determine a federal Indian policy.

"What really happened was the Indian people expressed areas of need and concern. The government gathered it all together, put it aside, and superimposed its own policy.

"The federal government says it would like to end its responsibility to the Indian people and pass it on to the provincial governments."

The provincial governments are not equipped to deal with this responsibility effectively, he said.

"The federal government pulled a very good political move with their legislation. They used the same terms and phrases used by the Indian people, but used their own ideas in how they felt the Indians should be directed."

●

Paul said the final meeting of Indians from all across Canada to discuss changes in the Indian Act was useless because the governments proposed direction had already been written.

FLUSHING FLASH from his cage to freedom was no trick Tuesday. As soon as George Moore and Mark Perry lifted the door he was off — heading for Race Rocks and new friends. Times reporter Pat Dufour is in the co-pilot's seat, watching Flash prepare for take-off.

Flash Is Banished to Sea Forever And He Couldn't Be More Grateful

By PAT DUFOUR

When a sea lion becomes rambunctious you don't send him to Coventry — you send him to the colony — and his heart's desire.

This happened Tuesday to Flash, the dominating 200-pound California sea lion at Sealand in Oak Bay — and he took his punishment with the same relish a tar downs his tot.

Flash, somewhere between three and four years old, had become a bit of a problem child.

★ ★ ★

It started when a male competitor, Cavendish, tried to stir a case of hero-worship with Ralph, the youngest sea lion in the pond. Cavendish resented Flash's interest in Ralph and bullied him mercilessly.

Eventually Cavendish was sold to the Vancouver aquarium and Flash was able to bask in the glow of Ralph's adoration.

Then Sealand president Bob Wright bought three smaller sea lions and the fun began all over again.

★ ★ ★

This time it was Flash who adopted the bullying tactics.

So Tuesday Wright decided that Flash had to go. His destination — the colony of Steller and California sea lions make ther headquarters at Race Rocks.

We set out from Pedder Bay in two runabouts. George Moore was at the wheel of ours. At the stern flopped Flash, nosing at the cage that kept him from slithering over the side.

He seemed to know his punishment was just what he would have ordered.

He snorted, pricked up his whiskers while we headed out into seas made lumpy by strong westerlies.

At the Race the winds whipped the ocean into a meringue froth . . . no place for a runabout.

So we headed into the bay off George Point on Bentinck Island. Seconds later the door of the cage was lifted and Flash plopped into the water without even taking a breath.

He dove, he swam, and circled the boats as if in a gratefual farewell.

It wasn't long before he headed toward the Race as if operating on radar.

Trainer Mark Perry said, almost regretfully:

"He never hesitated a second, one second in the boat, the next, away."

Wright, too, had some regrets.

"I only hope that he'll be able to make out with the killer whales."

★ ★ ★

Then, as if to reassure himself he related a story told him by some northern fishermen.

Sea lions are the natural prey of killer whales and it has been known for them to scramble onto a beach, right next to a man, to avoid their hunters.

Job Famine Drives Youth To the Road

The number of young travellers who stayed at Cool-Aid's house last month is nearly double the number in May a year ago.

Cool-Aid staff worker Laurie Smith said the organization provided meals and beds for 386 young people in May 1970 compared to 206 cases for May 1969.

"Young people are really on the road this year. There's no work, no jobs, nothing for them to do," he said.

Other staff workers said they expect the demand to become greater as the summer wears on. In August 1969, 683 persons stopped in at Cool-Aid for a few day's rest and lodging. And the staff estimates they may have to house more than 1,000 during August this year.

To help meet the increased demand, Cool Aid borrowed from the Department of National Defence 40 bunk beds, and mattresses, 80 blankets and 50 pillows.

The group has set these up in the basement of St. John's Church hall. St. John's donated the use of its hall basement for six months and gave Cool Aid a $1,000 grant to help operate the extended facility.

24 HOURS DAILY

Charles Barber, Cool Aid organizer, said the group also has 26 families in Victoria who have offered to billet young people who need a place to stay.

"We pride ourselves on being able to provide emergency service 24 hours a day," he said.

Smith said the Victoria police and welfare departments often refer young people to the house at 953 Balmoral. Others, he said, hear about Cool Aid through the grapevine before they arrive in Victoria.

"In the winter you get the hard core kids. In the summer kids are just bopping around," he said.

Salmonella Victims Recovering

The three people still in hospital following a salmonella outbreak 11 days ago are reported in good condition today.

Staff of the Greater Victoria metropolitan board of health and hospital laboratory technicians continue their efforts to pinpoint the source of the infection.

About 60 people were hit hard by the salmonella organism following a school reunion at The Empress June 13. They suffered severe cramps, headaches and diarrhea.

Four of the victims have been admitted to hospital since, two men and two women. One of them was sent home Tuesday.

Two were admitted last Wednesday, one Friday and one Sunday.

A Car Is a Car Is a Car Even If It Lacks a Motor

By STEVE HUME

A car without an engine, transmission and running gear is still a motor vehicle, Judge William Ostler ruled in provincial court Tuesday.

Tod Warren Morton, 19, of 1125 Empress, appeared in court on charges of operating a motor vehicle with no insurance, no current plates, and driving while under suspension.

Court had been told that Morton was behind the wheel of a towed car which had no engine or running gear when the charges were laid.

The defence argued that the vehicle in question was not a motor vehicle in terms of legal definition, and argued further that Morton was not driving it.

The prosecution countered that the vehicle was a car, and that Morton was still able to steer and control it and was therefore a driver.

Ostler said, after hearing arugment, that "clearly the device was a vehicle, and the vehicle as defined by the Motor Vehicles Act was designed to be self-propelled."

He said the vehicle was being used as a conveyance by Morton, and pointed out that although the engine had been removed, it had been removed for overhaul and was to be replaced.

Ostler ruled that Morton was a driver because he was operating the steering and towing mechanism of the vehicle.

"I consider this a test case. I have no desire whatever to punish this young man. I think he acted under a genuine misapprehension," Ostler said in finding Morton guilty on the first charge.

Instead of the usual fine of $250, he sentenced Morton to six months probation on the charge of driving without insurance.

However, Ostler quashed the second charge dealing with operating a car without current licence plates.

Morton was remanded to July 3 for trial on the charge of driving while under suspension.

ST. JOSEPH'S GETS REPAIRS

St. Joseph's Hospital Tuesday was authorized by the provincial government to award a $24,200 contract for renovations to the pediatric department.

The project includes construction of a three-bed intensive care unit, a centralized chart area, modernized bathroom facilities and renovation of ward areas.

Health Minister Loffmark said the contract, to be awarded to Cana Construction Ltd., is subject to regional hospital board approval.

Arthur Mayse . . .

BY A PLESANT ROAD IN Gordon Head, there lives a housewife who deserves well of her community. Her children do her proud. Her husband, a good provider, is handier than most with lawnmower and leaf rake. They keep the peace, and get along with their neighbors.

But one evening last week, this patient, slow-to-anger lady blew her top with a bang that may still be echoing around Saanich Municipal Hall.

Her name doesn't matter. What does is her reaffirmation of a truth too often neglected or ignored. This is that the citizen with a righteous cause, a redhot gripe and the determination to make a point stick, may achieve such results as you would scarce believe.

Like Moses of old, she struck the rock and caused water to gush forth. For that, she should be remembered with a small, fierce statue, or maybe a perpetually-bubbling fountain.

For years, a situation developed on the uphill side of her suburban road when summer brought warm weather, and sprinkling restrictions were yet to be announced.

In the late afternoon, water pressure would begin to drop. Taps that had yielded a reasonable flow earlier gave forth only a grudging trickle.

Another hour, and those taps were completely dry. The home-owners affected knew their drought would continue until late evening.

The dishes couldn't be washed. Nobody could have a bath, or even a drink of water. Naturally, everybody immediately became thirsty. So someone would take a pail, pioneer style, and a neighbor on the down-slope side of the road would fill it from his own diminished supply.

The taxpayers concerned are a tolerant bunch, not inclined to fuss or fume. They made do as best they could through each seasonal dry spell, exchanging grumbles on occasion, and hoping that a pump in the right location would eventually solve their problem.

Then came the evening when the housewife of my account arrived home with her family from an afternoon outing. She was hot, she was tired. She had dinner to cook, dishes to wash, and baths to run.

She turned a tap, and got not so much as a drip.

"That was too much," she tells me, "I decided something had to be done."

She phoned Saanich public works, using the after-five number, and explained her predicament. A police voice at the other end replied that public works was waiting for a pump to be delivered.

It was then that the lady blew her top.

"Listen," she said, "we've been hearing about that pump for the past five years. I need water now!"

Without luck, she tried to get in touch with Saanich Mayor Curtis (out of town) Acting Mayor Passmore, and several aldermen.

By way of variety, she also called Saanich police. The officer to whom she stated her case was sympathetic and a good listener. But her problem wasn't one he could help with.

But this time it was 8:30 p.m., and her telephone ear was slightly numb. But she dialed Saanich fire department.

Once more, she explained her problem. Then she demanded that the department open the hydrant kitty-corner from her home.

"Madam," said the fireman, "there is no water in that hydrant. Not a drop."

In the event of a fire, he explained Saanich would dispatch a pump-equipped standby rig with 4,000 gallons in its tank. While it coped, a pumper truck would hopefully seek for a hydrant that did have water in it.

Sometime after 9 p.m.—herself still phoning and still being told, "Sorry, there's nothing we can do" — she knocked off for the night.

By that time, her house taps were good for a piddling little stream.

Next morning, she settled grimly by her phone. She heard a good deal about the Big Pump in the Sky, but refused to be turned from her purpose.

"Finally I got through to Municipal Engineer Neville Life," she says. "He began to give me facts and figures. I told him, 'Your job is to get water to these houses somehow.'"

Before the morning was out, a couple of municipal trucks put into her home road. Pressures were checked; the water wizards got to work. The municipality was going to get water in somehow.

"That evening," the housewife ends her account, "we had almost more water pressure than we could handle."

Sprinkling restrictions have eased the general problem. And some day, the pump will come But the lady's final question strikes me as valid.

The job of switching a few houses to a more adequate source of water supply was done in a day. Why did those householders have to wait years for it?

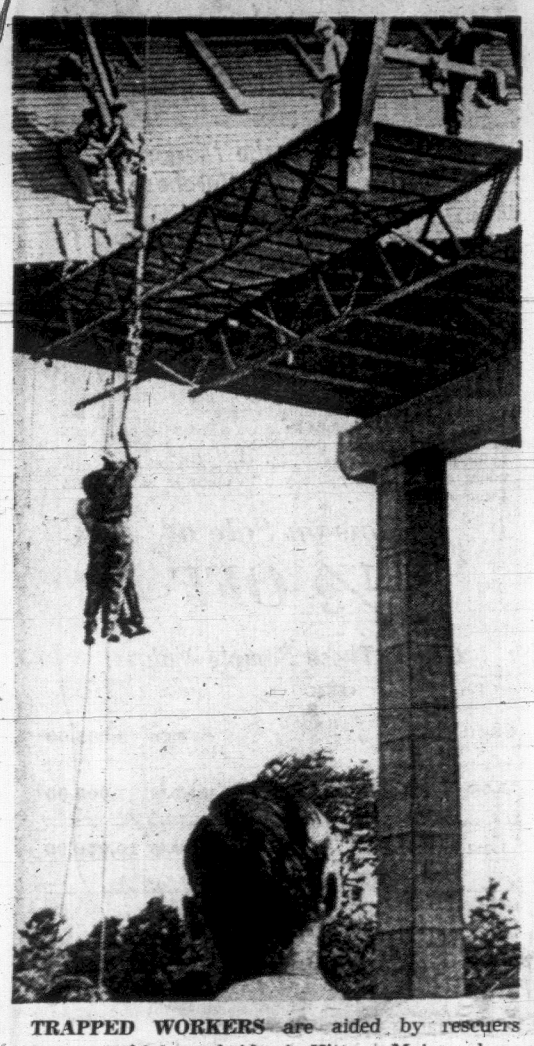
TWO MEN INJURED

Bomb Blast Kills Woman



TRAPPED WORKERS are aided by rescuers hoisted to highway bridge in Kittery, Maine, where construction platform gave way today, spilling eleven men 95 feet to the ground. Several workers were able to hang onto bridgework until rescuers arrived. (AP Wirephoto.)

FOUR MEN DIE IN PLUNGE FROM BRIDGE

KITTERY, Maine (UPI) — Eleven men fell 95 feet to the ground today when a platform on which they were working collapsed on a highway bridge under construction. Four men were killed and seven were injured, three seriously.

The platform holding 15 workmen gave way at one end but three managed to grab girders and a fourth was snared in a rope until rescued.

The moveable platform was beneath the roadway of the $21 million bridge designed to carry Interstate 95 over the Piscataqua River which flows between Kittery and Portsmouth, N.H.

As the platform gave way, two workers grasped bridgework but lost their grip and plunged to the dirt below.

Firemen on aerial ladders rescued the three men trapped in the girders for more than one hour. The workman dangling from a rope was brought down by a rescue crew in a large crane.

Cause of the accident was not known.

A fire official who helped rescue two of the men trapped in the girders said one was "very cool — he helped guide us to him." He said the second man was in a state of "semi-shock."

U.S. Senate Repeals Tonkin Resolution

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Senate voted today to repeal the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution, amid sharp debate over tactics being followed by Republican supporters of President Nixon's Southeast Asia policies.

This is the resolution which President Lyndon B. Johnson used as authority to escalate the war against North Vietnam. It was adopted following reports of an attack on American warships in the Gulf of Tonkin.

President Johnson later used the resolution to send more than 500,000 troops into South Vietnam.

Sunday Drinks For B.C.

By BRUCE YEMEN

Sunday drinking with meals in licensed dining establishments will be legal in British Columbia July 1, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today.

Extended hours of sale — to as late as 1 a.m. weekdays — were also announced as the provincial government instituted a number of recommended liquor law changes proposed by the Morrow Commission on Liquor in March.

Other changes allow women to serve drinks in all licensed premises, restrict pubs to serving one glass of beer at a time and make available colored photographic identification for 19-year-olds.

NO DANCING

Sunday liquor with meals will be available between the hours of noon and 10 p.m. No cabaret-type entertainment or dancing will be permitted on Sunday, Peterson said.

Licensed premises which currently close at midnight may stay open until 1 a.m. providing they are open no more than 14 hours in any business day. Earliest possible pub opening will continue at 9 a.m.

Private recreational clubs who serve regular meals can also serve liquor on Sundays between noon and 10 p.m.

Peterson said the 14-hour daily opening period is as long as any in Canada.

The identification cards for 19-year-olds or other youthful looking drinkers may be obtained through branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia where special equipment is already available.

VALIDATE CARDS

They will then have to be validated at a liquor store where an affidavit will be taken as to the age of the card-holder.

Peterson said the cards are voluntary but indicated it

'Wrenching' Foreign Policy Changes Likely

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will table six white papers Thursday which will map Canada's future course in world affairs for the next decade.

The six papers — totalling a concise aggregate of only 200 pages — are the distillation of the most intensive and longest policy review by the Trudeau administration on any subject.

They are expected to propose some wrenching changes in Canada's traditional stance towards the outside world and, because of Canada's special role as a innovative and influential middle power, are likely to be given extremely close scrutiny throughout the capitals of the world not only for information on the specific Canadian plans but hints for general trends in the international climate.

The two-year-long studies, launched on orders of Prime Minister Trudeau within days of his assuming office will be summarized by a general statement of overall policy.

It will be followed up with specific papers covering areas of special interest to the Trudeau government.

Rotating Postal Strikes Hit City, Four Provinces

Thousands of postal workers in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario walked off the job early today.

In Victoria, 320 members of the Letter Carriers Union and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers are on strike after walking out at 5:30 a.m. This is the second time Victoria workers have struck; the first was June 17.

• Stan Darlington, Victoria branch president of the CUPW said this morning all major centres on Vancouver Island are shut down. He said the walkouts would last 24 hours.

STILL ON STRIKE

On the mainland, walkouts began in New Westminster and quickly spread to Prince Rupert, all centres in the Okanagan and Kootenays, many parts of the Fraser Valley including Mission, Surrey, Port Coquitlam and Delta.

About 800 workers remained on strike in Calgary. They left their jobs Tuesday, and a union official said they would not be back at work before 6 a.m. Thursday.

Another 800 workers in Edmonton struck this morning for the second time since the Council of Postal Unions began rotating strikes in early May. There is no indication how long the Edmonton walkout will continue.

Postal workers in Winnipeg, the first city to be hit by rotating strikes, were on strike today for the third time.

The Winnipeg strike involves about 1,100 workers and will last 48 hours.

In Ontario, 900 men are off the job in Ottawa, 500 in Hamilton; and workers in parts of the borough of North York and the towns of Port Credit, Mississauga, Milton, Oakville, Malton, Woodbridge, Thornhill, Richmond Hill, Clarkson, Streetsville, Markham, Pickering, Stouffville and Ajax.

Hamilton's workers had just

Defence Building Target of Raid

OTTAWA (CP) — A St. Jean Baptiste Day bomb blast rocked a national defence headquarters building early today, killing one woman and injuring two other persons.

Dead is Jeanne D'Arc St. Germain, 50, a communicator operator in the defence telecommunications centre.

Capt. H. B. Vallance, 33, was taken to military hospital with lacerations. Pte. G. I. Swaffield, 23, was treated at the medical unit at defence headquarters for shock and later released.

Defence department spokesmen said the bomb was placed in a long cement well just outside the room where Mrs. St. Germain and Pte. Swaffield were working.

The bomb, believed to have contained a large quantity of dynamite, blew up at 6:26 a.m., a minute after an anonymous caller telephoned a local radio station to say there would be an explosion.

WINDOWS BROKEN

The blast ricocheted back and forth across Lisgar Street, shattering windows in a two-block area around the building in the city's central area and blowing a large hole through the wall.

A public works department official said damage to the defence department building, a Second World War "temporary" frame structure on a concrete foundation, was more than $10,000.

More than 100 windows were broken and there was damage to electrical circuits. But the communications centre was operating.

NO LEADS

Ottawa police said they have no leads on possible suspects.

But occurence of the blast on the feast day of St. Jean Baptiste, patron saint of French Canada, and the target selected pointed to possible action by separatist or Quebec nationalist terrorists.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux issued a statement saying he was "shocked at the bombing outrage." He extended sympathy to the family of Mrs. St. Germain.

Cadieux said the building is regularly patrolled by armed forces security guards but the bomb apparently was planted between patrols.

"Additional security precautions have been put into effect," he said.

Telephone bomb threats later in the morning against the Chateau Laurier Hotel and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics proved false.

BARRICADE STREET

Police and firemen blocked off glass-littered Lisgar Street in front of the building while city police, the RCMP and armed forces investigators picked their way through the debris.

The blast, which blew out heavy chunks of the concrete foundation and peeled off the outside shingles to leave a hole 10 by 12 feet, came about 30 minutes before the guard changes at the main entrance to the building and an hour

Labor Group To Help Pay Guild's Fines

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of about 80 unions affiliated with the British Columbia Federation of Labor have agreed to press their memberships for financial contributions to the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, faced with fines and legal fees of about $100,000 arising from the five-week tugboat strike.

"Everyone pledged to do everything possible to assist the guild," said Federation secretary Ray Haynes Tuesday night following a special meeting.

RAIDS SUPPORT GROUND ACTION

U.S. Escalates Cambodia Air War

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The Cambodian military command disclosed today that United States jet fighter-bombers, in an apparent major shift in U.S. policy, have attacked deep into Cambodia in direct support of Cambodian ground forces.

The announcement, which U.S. officials in Saigon would neither confirm nor deny, coincided with reports that North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units were marshalling east of Phnom Penh, and that heavy fighting had broken out again at Kompong Speu, 30 miles southwest of the Cambodian capital.

The U.S. air strikes helped break the month-long siege of Kompong Thom, a provincial capital 80 miles north of Phnom Penh, a Cambodian spokesman said. This extension of the American air war appeared to be a sign of recognition by the United States that without some assist from strong U.S. firepower, the Cambodian forces might crumple under the Communist command's growing pressure.

Maj. Am Rong, the Cambodian spokesman, said he could furnish no details on the exact location of attacks, the types of U.S. jets involved, the time they went into action or the results.

Eyewitness reports on Tuesday from Kompong Thom and Skoun, another endangered Cambodian town, said U.S. propellor-driven OV-10 aircraft had been marking targets for South Vietnamese jet fighter-bombers supporting Cambodian troops.

The U.S. command in Saigon, apparently under strict orders from the Pentagon, has refused repeatedly to discuss U.S. air activity in Cambodia other than to repeat the Pentagon's admission Monday that American pilots were flying up to 100 miles inside Cambodia to attack North Vietnamese and Viet Cong supply lines.

Komgpong Thom is 95 miles from the South Vietnamese border and well beyond the 21.7-mile limit set by President Nixon for U.S. ground forces in Cambodia.

Meanwhile, Cambodian troops began a sweep today about five miles east of Phnom Penh, where a North Vietnamese and Viet Cong force was reported marshalling, possibly for an attack with rockets and mortars on the capital.

It was the closest concentration of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces reported around the capital to date and tended to confirm intelligence reports that an attack could come at any time.

The Cambodian spokesman also reported that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops had surrounded the provincial capital of Kompong Speu, 30 miles west southwest of Phnom Penh, and that fighting for control of the town was heavy. He said the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong had launched repeated attacks agains the government defenders, but that the Cambodians apparently still held the town.
